The 1960 Altius

of the School of Arts & Sciences

American University of Beirut
Beirut, Lebanon

Produced by the Arts & Sciences Yearbook Committee

FORTIUS, Citius, Altius — Ever Stronger, Ever Faster, Ever Higher. From this ancient Greek motto the Arts and Sciences Society takes its name. Altius signifies reaching upward in scholastic, recreational and school activities. Or as the poet Browning wrote: "A man's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for." Altius is a goal which should inspire everyone of us to raise himself to new plateaus of achievement. The university stands on the threshold of great advancement. This year has been a milestone, marked with increased planning and progress. Construction of new buildings is but one visible sign of achievement. With the largest enrollment in AUB history, we in the School of Arts and Sciences can look back on our campus life and face the future with one united goal — to reach ever higher — altius.

THE CHAPEL serves as a daily reminder that the great men who founded the American University of Beirut had one main goal — to climb ever higher.

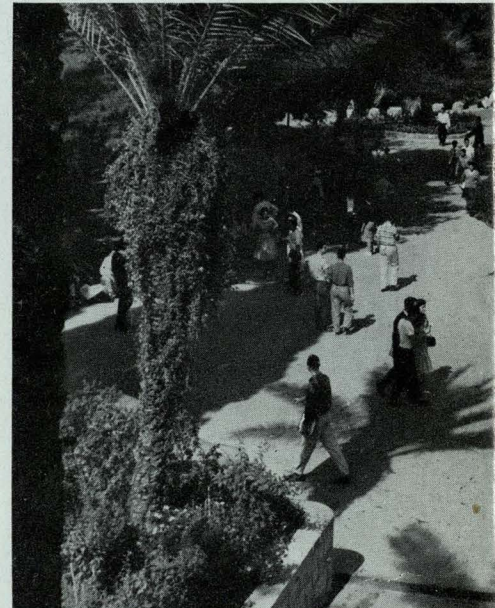

WE PAUSE outside the library donated by Nami Jafet, a man whose AUB education helped him attain a high place in the world, and a man who shared his fortune with us.

OUR CAMPUS provides us with numerous scenic spots where we can relax and talk with fellow students.

OUR CAMPUS is green and beautiful because of the many men who spend hours to help make it one of Lebanon's garden spots.

WE CAN look down on beauty from any window on our campus, but in looking down, we remember that our goal is always up and higher.

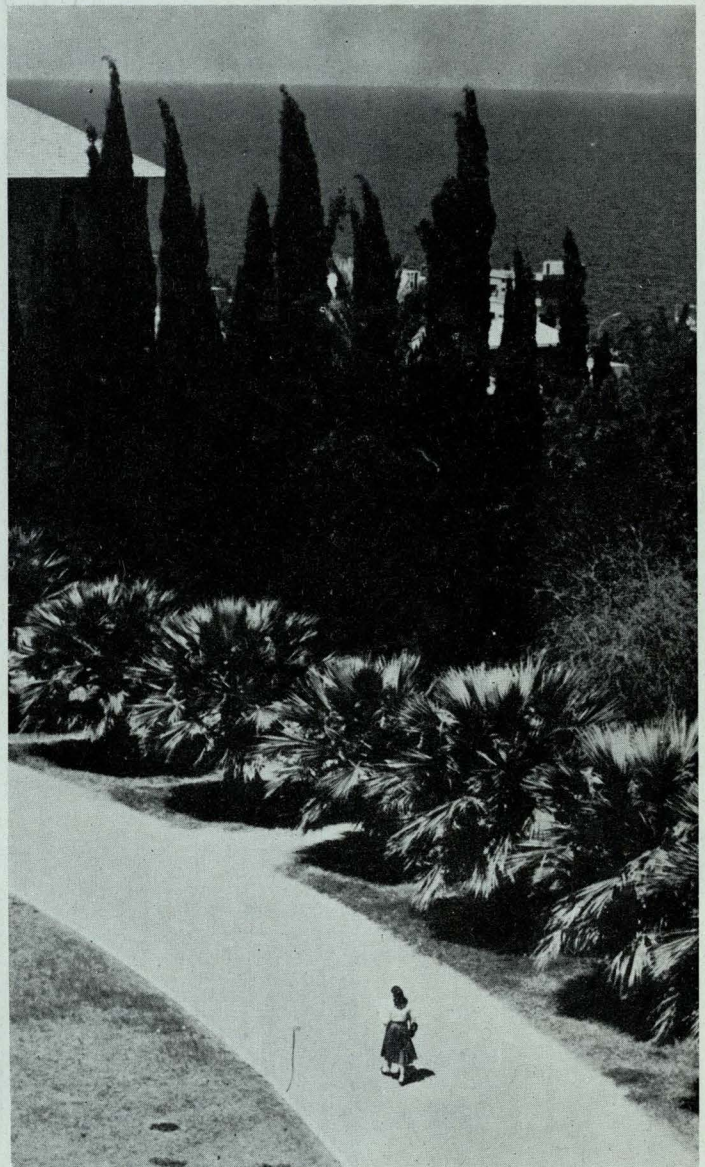

COLLEGE HALL, an AUB landmark, serves as a constant reminder that many great men have struggled to help make us what we are today — grateful graduates.

WE STAND surrounded by trees and plants and exchange notes or ideas before going to another lecture that will help us achieve our goal.

FRIENDSHIP ON the AUB campus takes on a new significance since here we can easily make friends with students from 41 countries.

SOMETIMES WE find that we must walk alone — but walking alone, we recall the shocking fact that AUB can help — but we must prove our worth.

WE PAUSE in the doorways to knowledge, both as we leave (left) and as we enter (below).

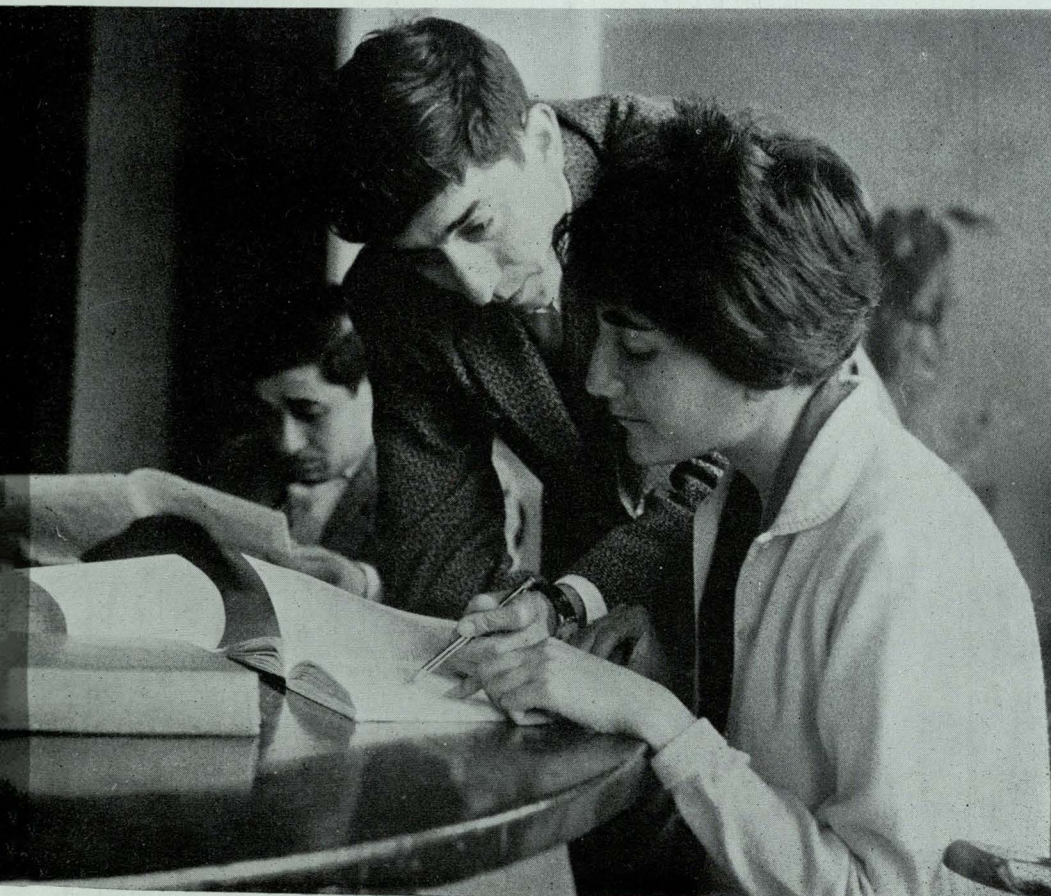

COFFEE BREAKS, whether in the morning, afternoon or evening, give us the pause that refreshes and the opportunity to chat with friends.

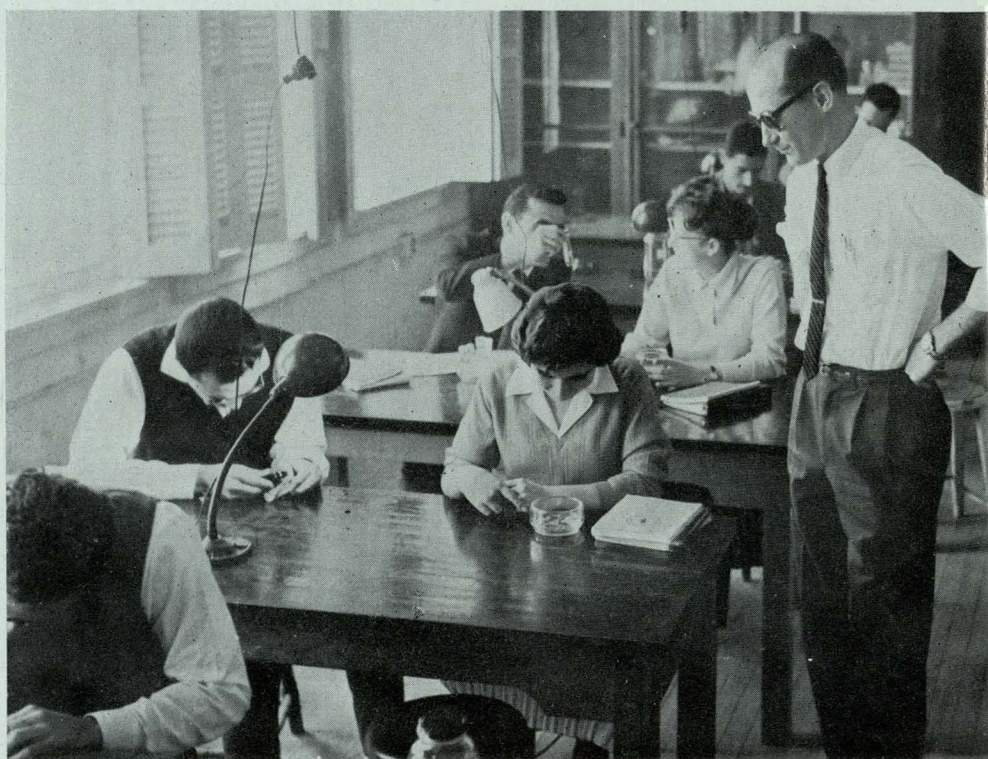

WEST HALL'S Common Room, a beehive of activity, is often quiet enough for individual study or a quick game of tawla.

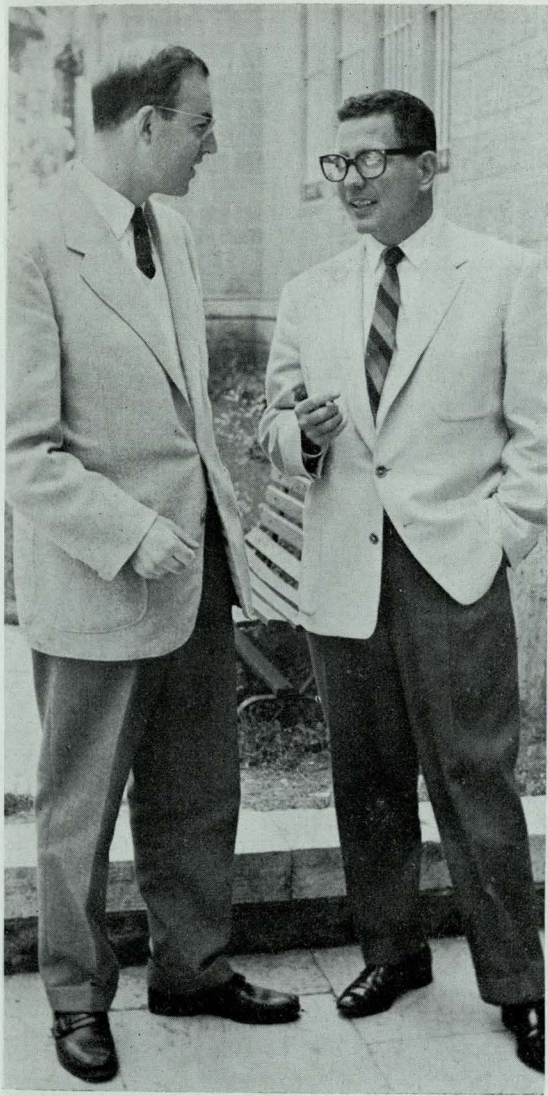

WE WORK and study together because we realize that through mutual understanding we can reach our goals.

SIHLOUETTED IN the morning sun, we relax outside Jafet Library and talk to classmates before we re-enter the door to study.

WE PERFORM experiments in our various laboratories, realizing that through our findings we can come closer to our final goals.

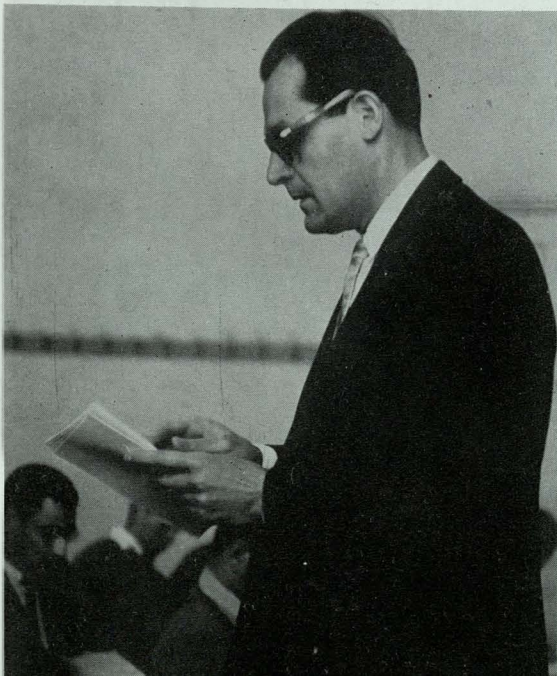

WE ENGAGE in conversations no matter if we are on our way to classrooms or to the milk bar, for we know that in mutual exchange of ideas lies greatness.

OUR PROFESSORS compare notes and exchange ideas inside office rooms and outside so that we are better informed.

LECTURES, SOMETIMES, too erudite, but frequently meaningful, inspire us to reach higher and become scholars like our professors.

WITH NIMBLE fingers
we transfer our thoughts to canvas, and we display our creative skill to an appreciative audience.

WE BECOME thespians and perform in both Arabic and English.
In this case it's the Arabic play, Fathers and Sons.

WE PARTICIPATE in musical events, such as the Christmas Concert, when 72 musicians performed under Prof. Arnita's direction.

WE POKE fun at tourists with an original skit written for the New Students' Week Program.

WE LAUGH at the antics of our more versatile friends as they perform in an original skit during New Students' Week.

WE BECOME acquainted by dancing under the stars at the Acquaintance Party during New Students' Week.

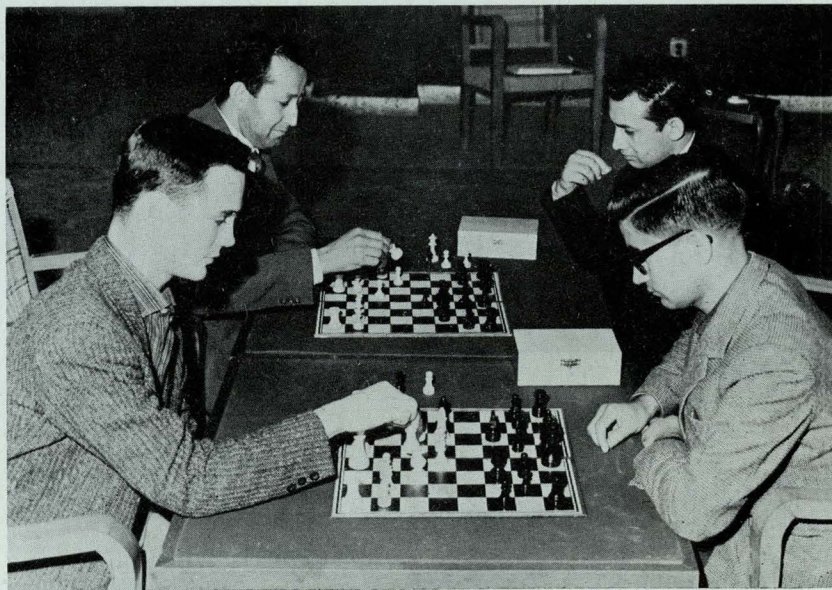

WE CLOWN around and on rare occasions bring our nargilehs to campus for laughs.

WE SCAN the many bulletin boards for important announcements about activities or classes.

WE CONTRIBUTE to worthy causes such as the A & S Society's collection for victims of the Agadir earthquake.

CONCENTRATING ON every move, we train our minds to react quickly by focusing our attention on chess.

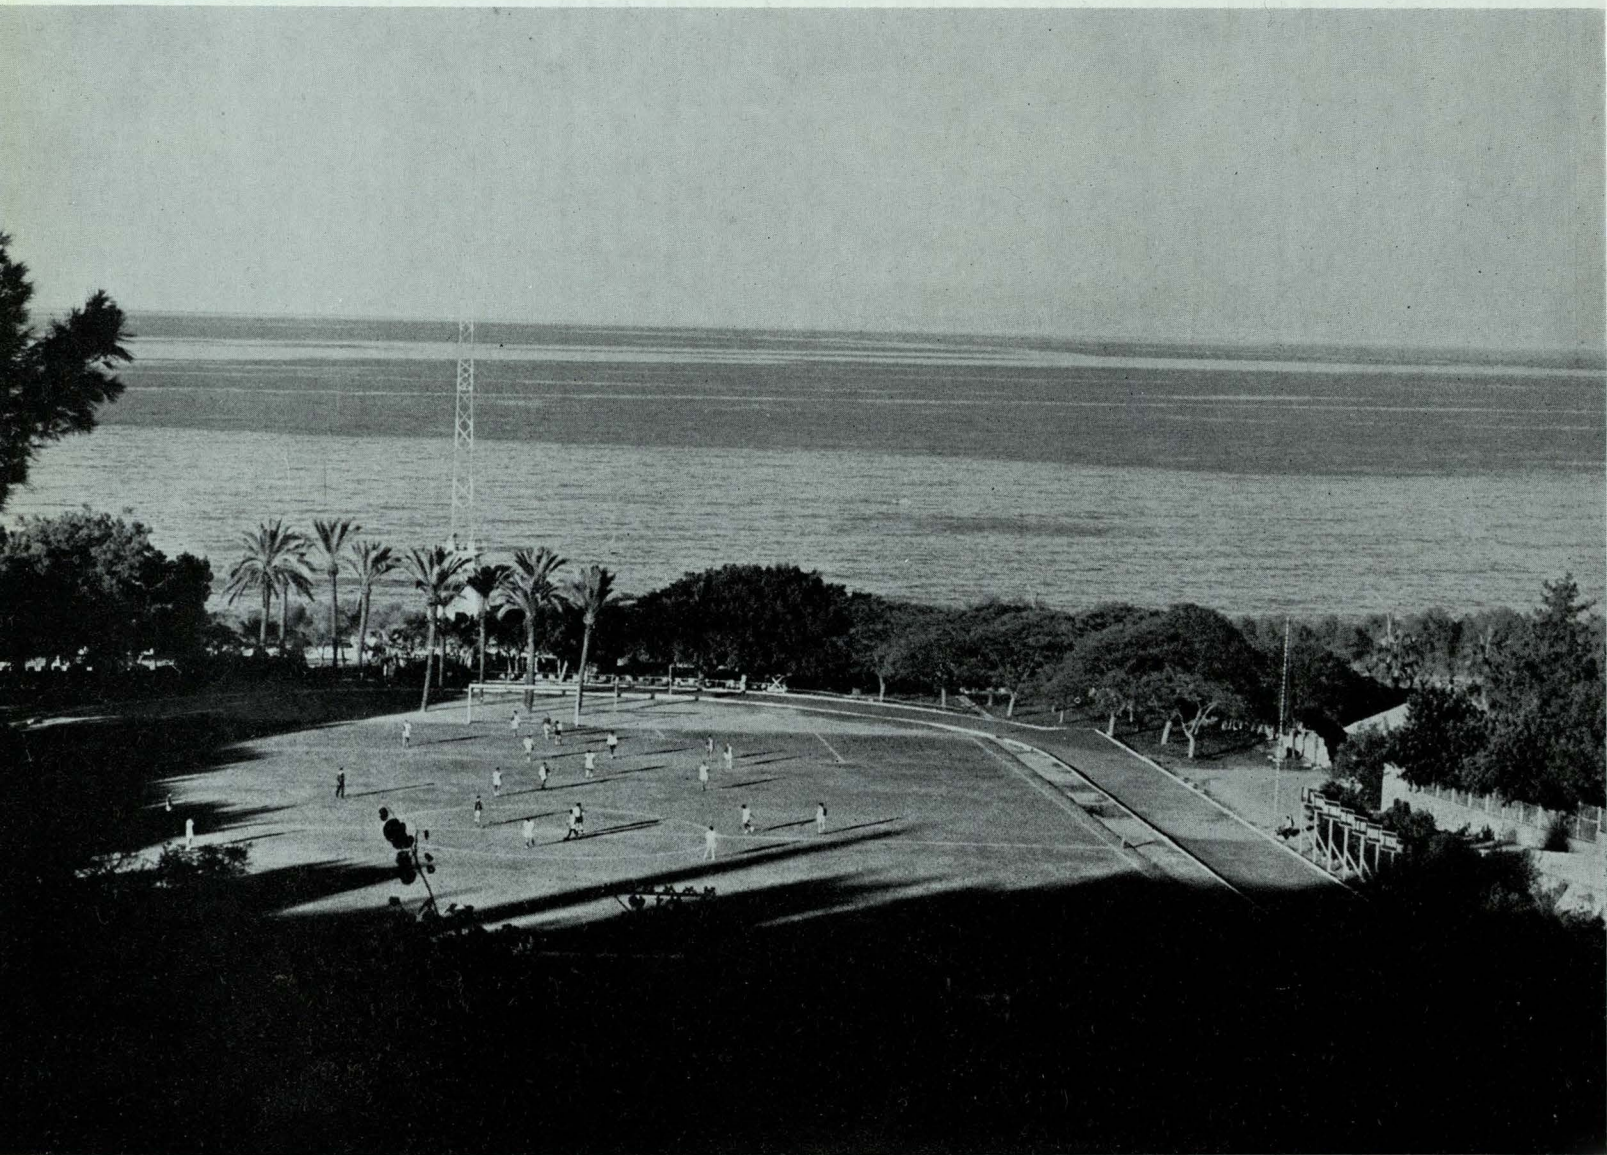

DRESSED IN colorful costumes, we step lively in the native dances at the Folk Dance Festival.

WE ALSO smile as Mr. Saba plants a congratulatory kiss on the cheek of Feryal Segal, the Arts and Sciences Society's Queen.

WE CHEER Miss AUB, Magda Mabruk, and her maids of honor, Marina Kashkush and Claudette Bashir.

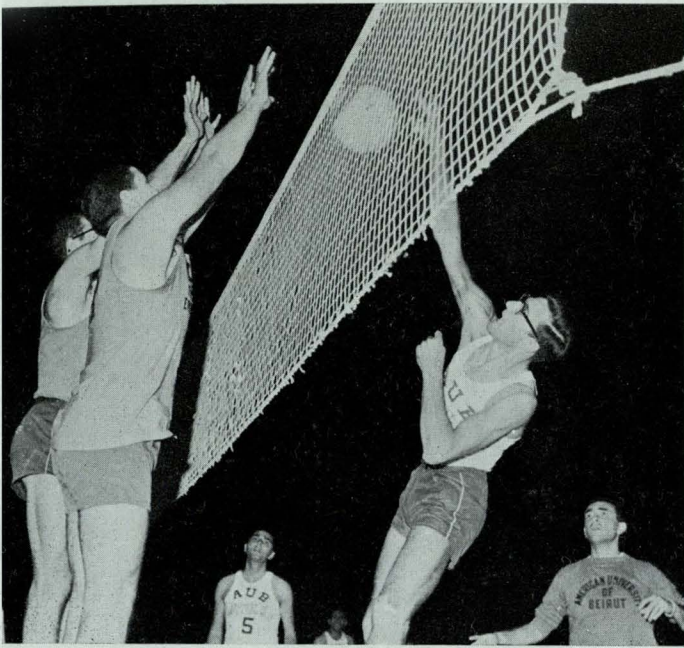

PROFESSIONAL ENTERTAINERS thrill us with outstanding shows such as "A Bedouin Wedding," which was sponsored by the A & S Society.

WE LOOK down on the Green Field and watch our athletes competing against Engineering for the AUB championships.

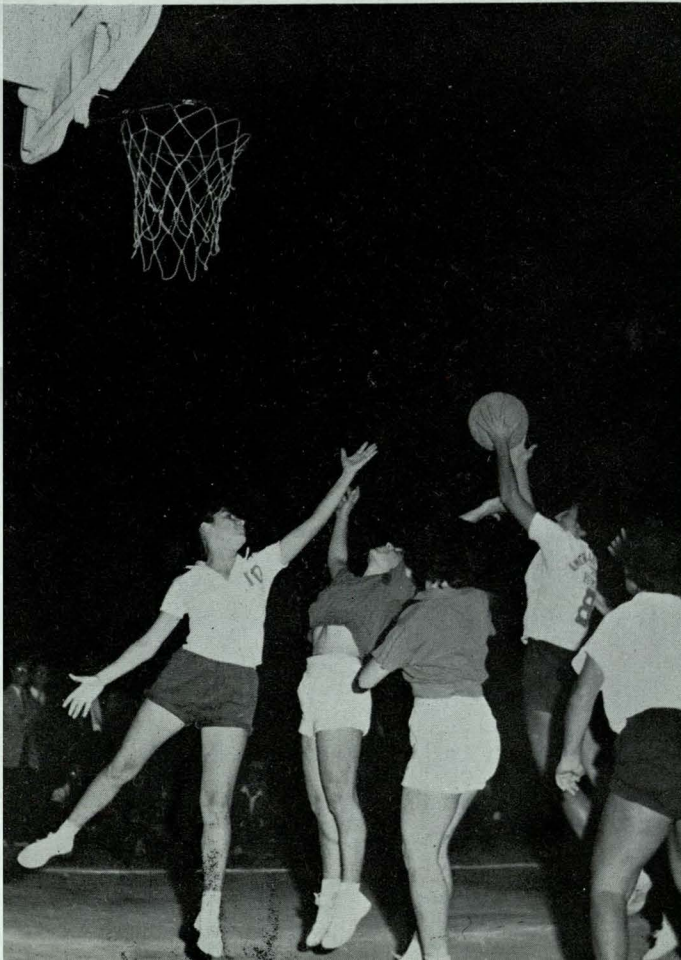

WE GO down to the field and cheer our athletes on to victory. Twice this year we cheered them to victory over Engineering.

VOLLEYBALL CAPTAIN Jerry Caromandanis leaps high in the air to smash the ball at two Engineers.

OUR WOMEN'S teams uphold the Arts and Sciences sports records both in basketball and volleyball.

WE SCRAP for the elusive ball both in practice and in the games for the AUB championships.

ACTIVITIES are an integral part of our education. Through active participation, we can become more mature, better informed individuals. Recreation and a chance to forget the books are available for students whose interests range from biology to philosophy. Through participation, the knowledge we gain in the classroom is supplemented with important social activities that enable us to reach ever higher. Lectures, discussions and new projects, such as the Model Security Council, challenge each of us to produce his best for himself and for his school. The opportunity to meet and know those who have similar interests and to explore new academic regions is provided by the societies. Friendship and fun through activities lead us ever higher — altius.

PRODUCING the yearbook was the responsibility of the 1960 Altius staff. Yearbook staffers have the responsibility of getting subscriptions, collecting advertising, selecting picture settings, supervising the photographers, identifying the pictures and writing the copy. Producing a yearbook requires patience and the realization that deadlines must be met. It also requires the complete cooperation of all faculty and students. This year the first Altius staff produced A & S's first hard-cover book and came up with the biggest book in A & S yearbook history.

AQUAINTANCE with great Arabic literature, which is primarily promoted through lectures to members every Wednesday evening, is the aim of the Arabic Society. Writers who have made significant contributions to Arabic literature speak at these meetings. Among those speaking this year were Dr. Constanting. Zurayk, Dr. Anis Frayha, Mr. Ahmad abu Saad, Mr. Shawki Abu Shakra, Mr. Ihsan Abbas and Dr. Jibrail Jabbur. Members have the opportunity to express their views through the question and discussion sessions after each meeting. The society also sponsored a reception and trips to Rashana and Al-Fureikah.

ALTHOUGH it changed its name this Fall from AUB Drama Club to Arts and Sciences Drama Club, this group still has members from all schools and plans its performances to suit all tastes. This year's activities included the playreading of G. B. Shaw's Arms and the Man, "An Evening of Theater" which included Thornton Wilder's The Long Christmas Dinner and a T. S. Elliot recital by Miss Joy Gibson and Prof. Arthur Sewell, the production of the long awaited Arabic play, Fathers and Sons, the one-act comedy Harlequinade and the full costume playreading of Shaw's You Never Can Tell. Terrence Rattigan's Harlequinade was also produced on television. The society ended its year with a dancing party.

ARTS and Sciences Society was founded in 1956 with the purpose of promoting unity, fostering harmony and engendering a better understanding among the students in the School of Arts and Sciences. In addition, the society tries to provide student responsibility for activities and serve as a link with the administration. Noteworthy projects include the introduction of the A & S symbol and blazar, a "Bedouin Wedding", collection of funds for Agadir earthquake victims and a reception for the athletes. Lecture topics included Lebanese Independence Day, the Partition of Palestine and "The Big Power Look at the Arab World". The society also sponsored the A and S Yearbook and A and a Week.

SEEKING to be a forum through which interest can be stimulated in the developments of the different fields of chemistry, the Chemical Society promotes an understanding of the use of chemistry in modern society through public education. Faculty members and invited guests give lectures throughout the year. Discussion opportunities always follow the lectures. To promote close friendships among persons seriously interested in chemistry, the society has sponsored formal dancing parties and receptions. Trips to the Cedars, Beit-ed-Dine and Sidon were arranged. Finally, to see chemistry in the field, trips to industrial plants were arranged.

ONE of the largest and most active groups on the campus is the Commerce Students' Society. Its biggest project of the year was the Oil Industry Exhibition in January. More than 7000 visitors saw the displays of five major oil companies: ARAMCO, Tapline, Kuwait Oil Company, Iraq Petroleum Company and MEDRECO. In addition, the society sponsored a lecture by Mr. King Merritt on the prospect of mutual funds in the Middle East. The Society also contributed heavily to worthwhile projects. The society sponsored trips to Baalbek and Cairo. Socially, the society had a reception, dancing party and its annual ball.

ECONOMICS Society has a dual goal: providing activities for its members and promoting joint projects between member societies in the School of Arts and Sciences. The society attempts to promote understanding and stimulate interest in economics through lectures, debates and informal discussions. Through cooperation with other societies, the society goes beyond economics to create an intellectual atmosphere that will benefit all concerned. The society sponsored two lectures by graduate students and jointly sponsored a pannel discussion with the PSPA Society during A & S Week. Socially, the society visited Farayah, Baalbeck and Al-Koura. Included in its year's agenda were parties and a graduation dinner.

THE Education Society has attempted to broaden the study and understanding of educational problems. The society, through its activities, endeavors to promote better relationships between students and to sponsor projects of educational significance. Lectures, discussions and films are a part of the Friday coffee hours. Dr. Martin Jenkins, a visiting college president, gave a public lecture under the auspices of the society, and the society also sponsored. "International Evening". A new project is the "Educational Society Bulletin", which provides current society news. Rabbit's Island, Beaufort Castle and Krack des Chevaliers were destinations for this year's trips.

POLITICAL SCIENCE AND PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION SOCIETY —

ATTEMPTING to foster a professional spirit, the Political Science and Public Administration Society uses lectures, social activities and trips as tools to attain this goal. The PSPA Society practices its role of dedication to future political life by bringing together students of different race, creeds and political viewpoints to work for the benefit of society. Its largest project this year was an experiment, the sessions of the Model Security Council, in which students actually presented the views of member countries on four major issues. A student debate on the prospects and future of socialism in Lebanon and public lectures filled the educational program. Socially there were the acquaintance reception, the Christmas Ball and a trip to Baalbek in addition to the annual graduation dinner.

PHILOSOPHY, the discipline of thought, is brought to life through the Philosophy Society. This group endeavors to encourage philosophical inquiry, exchange, original ideas and emphasize the role of philosophy in shaping modern thought. To promote a favorable campus attitude toward philosophy, the society meets bi-weekly for the reading of papers and discussion. Professors are invited to meet with the group and lead debates. The society sponsored a public series of lectures during the John Dewey Centennial in October. It also sponsored a panel discussion in memory of Albert Camus in January. The famous English philosopher, A. C. Ewing, also lectured to the society. Socially, the group visited Shtaura, the Cedars and the village of the Lebanese artist, Michel Basbous.

STIMULATION of healthy psychological thinking and the integration of the spirit of friendship among members and professors is the aim of the Psychology Society. To achieve this goal, professors gave lectures and participated in pannel discussions. Question and answer periods always followed these sessions. Included in the many activities of the society were two trips to the mental hospital at Asfourieh. On the lighter side, there were excursions to Rabbit Island and the Jeïta Caves. The Psychology Society also sponsored coffee hours, receptions and a graduation beach party.

THE SSS of the Sociology Students' Society also stands for study, service and social activities. The exchange of ideas on current sociological problems and the understanding of the area are achieved through activities such as the panel discussion on social work opportunities in the Lebanon. To serve AUB, the society sponsors lectures, such as the one on capital punishment, throughout the year. Other projects include discussion of films on campus problems. In the field, the society has taken trips to the Krak des Chevaliers, the Cedars and Beit Mery for a change of pace. Social activities also include visits to members' homes and a Christmas dinner at Dr. George Fetter's home.

ALTUS, ever higher, is best applied to sports where the aim is to break records. But breaking records is not the only goal; one can constantly strive, through athletics, to improve his physical fitness and gain a proper mental attitude. This year many records have been broken, and the A & S team have fared well against all other schools. In football, A & S recaptured the crown from Engineering in the Autumn Games and kept the title in the Winter Games. In the Spring, our athletes dropped the football championship but soared ever higher in the 66th Annual Field Day, when they almost doubled the score of their closest rivals and two of our runners set two AUB records. To excell requires training and patience, acceptance of defeat and spirit for that last extra push needed to snap the tape or clear the bar. Sportsmanship is a sign of maturity, and our athletes have proved, that whether win or lose, they have a sense of fair play.

JOHN SAHAKIAN breaks the tape in the 200-meter dash in the Spring Games for a new AUB record. He also tied the record in the 100-meter dash.

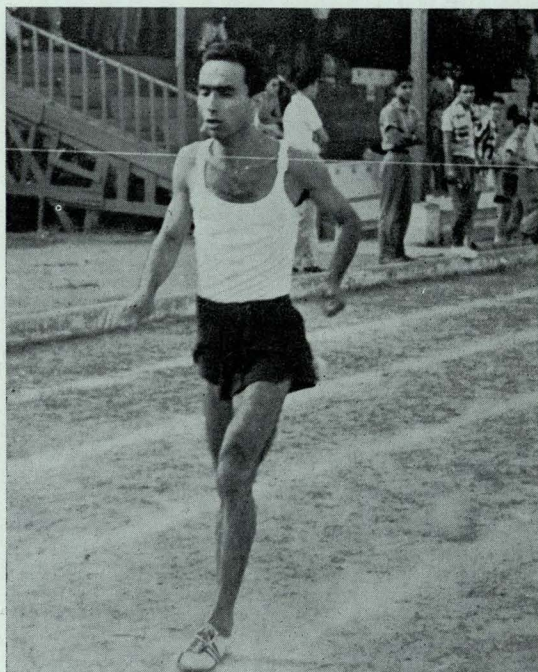

OUR athletes came through like the champions they are in both the fall and spring field days. In fact their victories were runaways as far as the team races and were record breaking for two athletes.

In the autumn games, Norman Himadeh and Richard Moats dominated in the field events, while teammate John Sahakian swept the 100 and 200-meter dashes.

In the recent Spring games, Sahakian and Michel Tawil were outstanding as they were both double winners and record breakers. Sahakian set a new mark of 22.8 seconds in the 200 and tied the mark of 10.9 in the 100. Tawil broke the 400-meter mark with a time of 52.2 seconds and ran a fine race against the Engineer's Shilbay'ya to win the 800-meter run in 2:03.1.

Himadeh was the individual champion in the Spring games with Moats in the runner-up spot. Himadeh's firsts came in the high jump and the 200-meter hurdles, while Moats won the shot put and tied for first in the pole vault.

NORMAN HIMADEH leaps to first place in the Autumn Games broad jump. Himadeh won the cup in the Spring Games for scoring the highest number of points.

MICHEL TAWIL breaks the tape in the 400-meter run. In the Spring Games, Tawil broke the 28-year-old record set by George Fayoum.

AFTER a long drought, the A & S football team leaped out at the Engineers in both the Autumn and Winter games championships to win 3-1 and 1-0, respectively. A veteran squad played up to its potential in both the first two championships, but a revitalized Engineering eleven won the spring crown from our squad, 3-2.

John Shibr's thrilling unassisted screw shot provided a last-minute margin in the win in the Winter Games, 1-0. Goalie Makram Rahhal was outstanding in the nets and deserved his shutout.

The squad was led by the play of Captain Rolandos Virardi, Shibr, Rahhal, Ramzi Alamudin, and George Abu Khader during most of the season's play. The year's record was six wins eight losses and two ties. Seven of the losses were to outside teams. The team seemed to play closer to its potential only when the game involved interschool rivalry as the record indicates.

Other members of the team are: Ibrahim Naghaway, Uthman Abdul Kadir, Musa Yasin, Suleiman Hag-el-Aghib, Muhammad Khulaifat, Mustafa Ghalayini, Muhummad Sadik, Idris Nurudin, Yemanu Tesfaiohannes, Hashim Hussayn, and Richard Madobe.

ROLANDOS VIRARDI, Arts and Sciences captain, helped his team defeat Engineering in the Autumn and Spring games.

MAKRAM RAHHAL leaps high in the air to ward off an attack by Engineering in the Autumn Games. Arts and Sciences won the championship twice this year.

WELL balanced and luckless are the two best words to describe the Arts and Sciences basketball squad. The cagers turned in a record of three wins and four losses. Although slated to win against Medicine in the semi-finals of the Fall Games, our cagers lost a hard-fought game to the Medics, 47-50, in the semi-finals. Two of A & S's major victories were against Brummana and Hagazian College. Captain Khaldun Jajeh was high scorer in both victories and high point man for the year. Other team members included: John Na'man, Edward Ferguson, Jim Pierce, Nadim Homs, Raymond Hanna, Khaled Umari, Sami Habibi, Zahi Hawwa and Zuheir Amad.

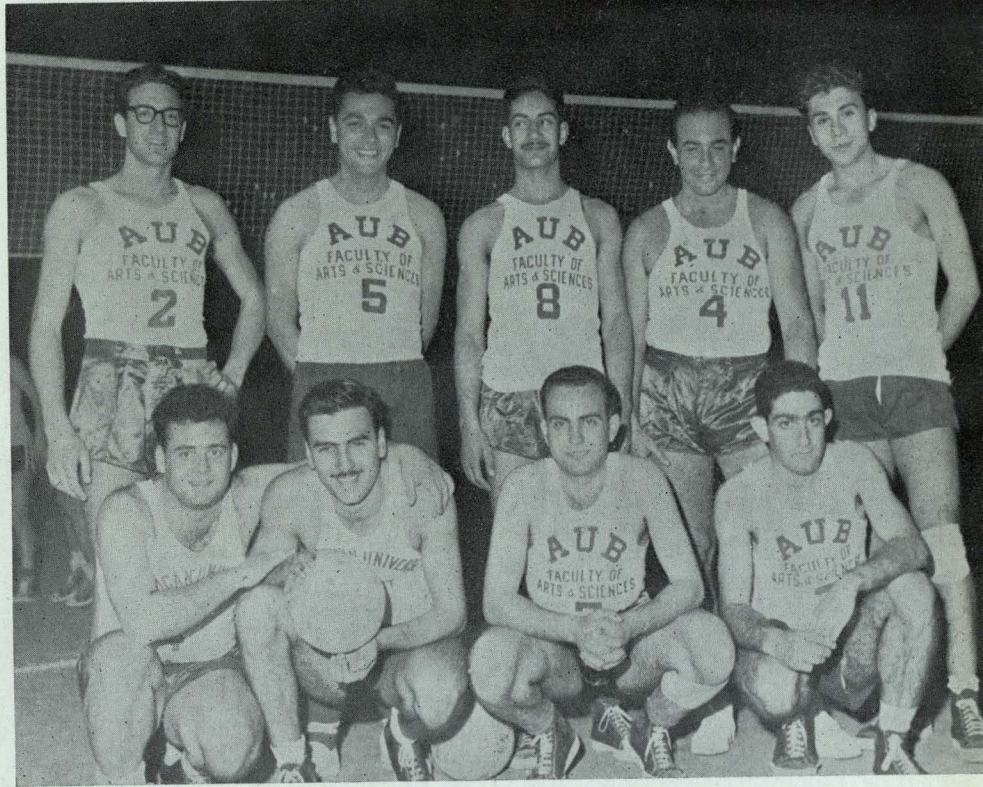

IT'S THE TIPOFF between A & S and Medicine. In a very close game, A & S lost by a score of 47-50.

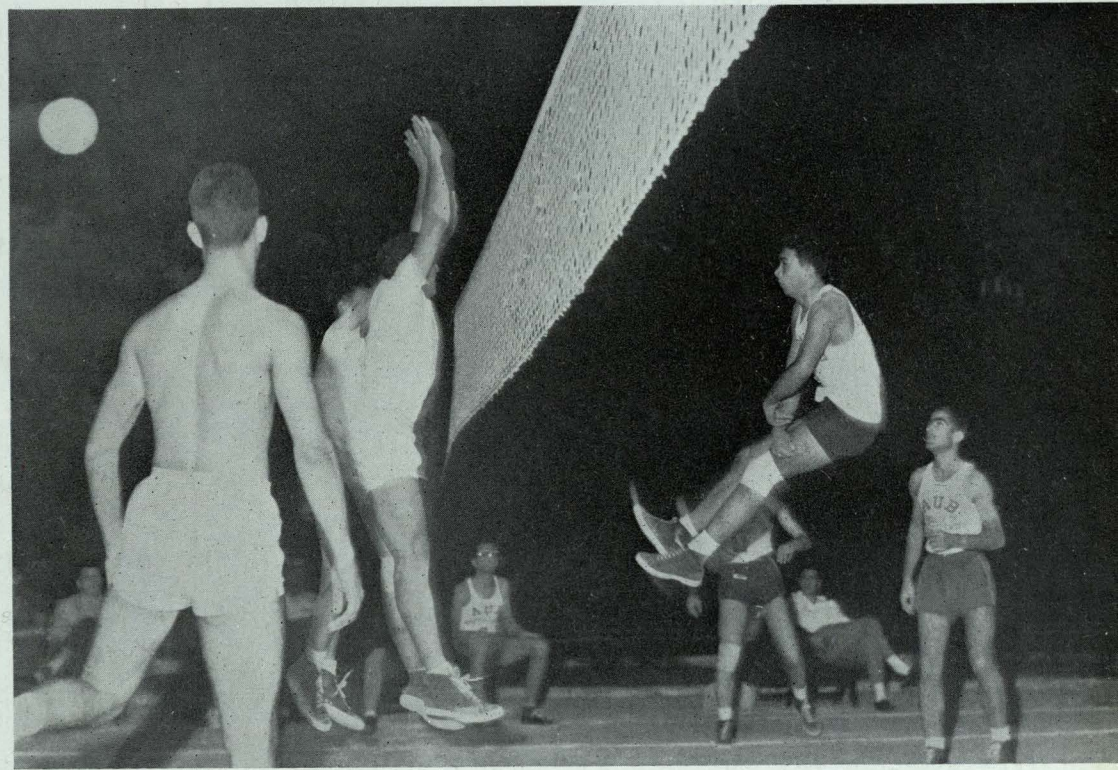

AN UNIDENTIFIED A & S squad member drops the ball into the basket in a game against the strong Engineering team.

LED by Captain Jerry Caramondanis and his powerful smashes, the A & S Volleyball team power-housed its way to championships in both the Autumn and Spring Games. When the pressure was on, Arts and Sciences proved to be far superior to its rivals, Engineering, and came through in fine form to take the faculty championships. Caramondanis was not only outstanding for A & S but for the varsity as well. The spiking captain was ably assisted throughout the season by Mohammed Sheikh, Bassam Mitir, Munir Kamel, Salim Nahhas, Samir Nusayn, Bosam Barakat, Rolandos Virardi and Tony Sabbagh.

WHEN one considers all other sports at AUB, our athletes fared well. In softball, Arts & Sciences won the Autumn Games championship but lost to Engineering in the Spring Games. Outstanding for A & S were the pitching of John Shiber, the catching of Jim Pierce and the hitting of Captain Nabil Deeb. Our boys did not fare too well in tennis, but they put up a game fight. In badminton, A & S had it all the way, with Laig Hanafi capturing a triple crown twice. Dick Moats led the A & S team to victory in water sports. Moat's diving was excellent.

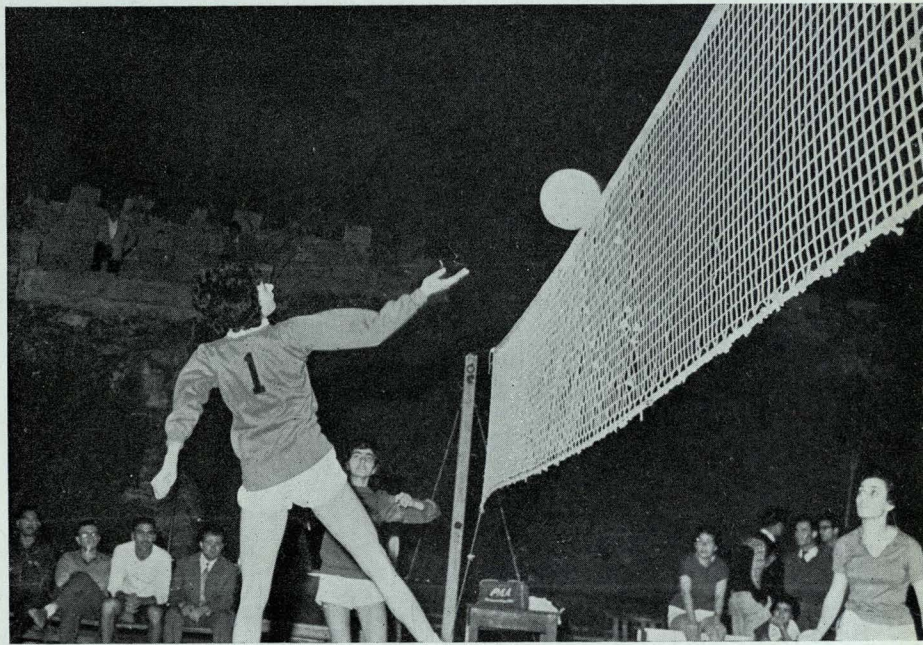

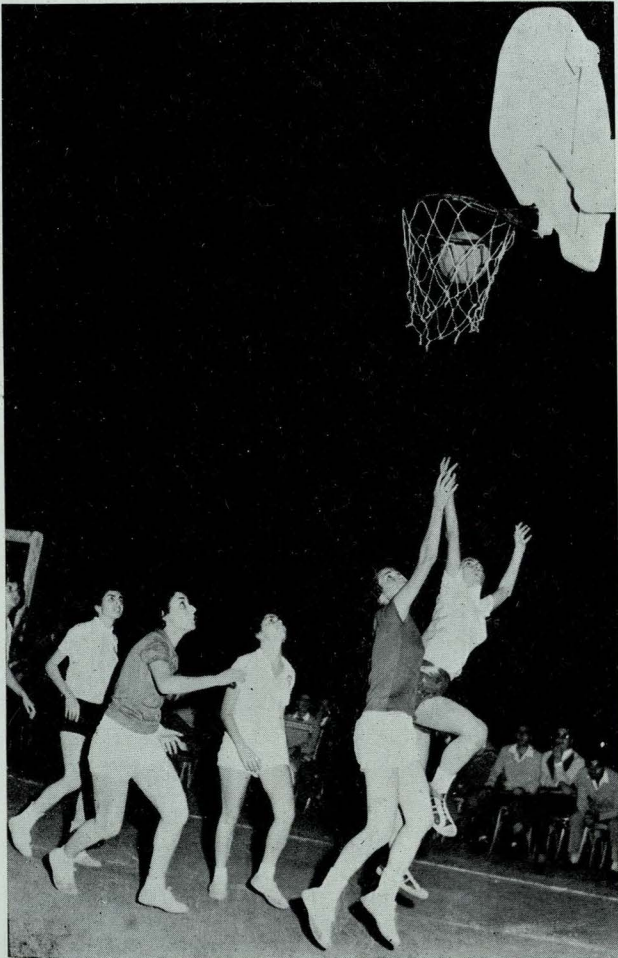

TWO FUTURE tennis players sit in the shadows and watch the A & S squad put up a good fight against Medicine.

FOR the first time in AUB history, the University had an organized group of cheerleaders, thanks to A & S girls. The cheerleaders backed our A & S men in American football against ACS. Elsewhere in women's sports, A & S girls won the volleyball championships in the Autumn Games but lost in the Spring to Medicine. A & S girls also won the Autumn Games basketball championship. In volleyball the co-eds were led by Nora Klabik, and in basketball by Rita Yenikomshian.

NORA KLABIK clears the net with a neat backhand smash in a game with Medicine. The A & S women won, 2-0.

An A & S GIRL sinks a close one in a game with Medicine. The A & S team came through with another victory.

LEADERSHIP is needed for a group to attain any worthwhile goal. There must be a wiser, more knowing, subtle influence to point the way to a definite, progressive end. Throughout the year, we students look to the faculty to open new roads so that we may proceed ever higher. Inspiration is gained through listening to and learning from men who have attained success — but who do not allow their stature to interfere with setting higher, more advanced aims. Admiration and appreciation are due the teachers, who are also our friends, for their constant striving and sacrifice to enable us to achieve the ultimate goal of university life — a true education. By advising and letting us make mistakes, the faculty urges us upward to become mature, contributing citizens.

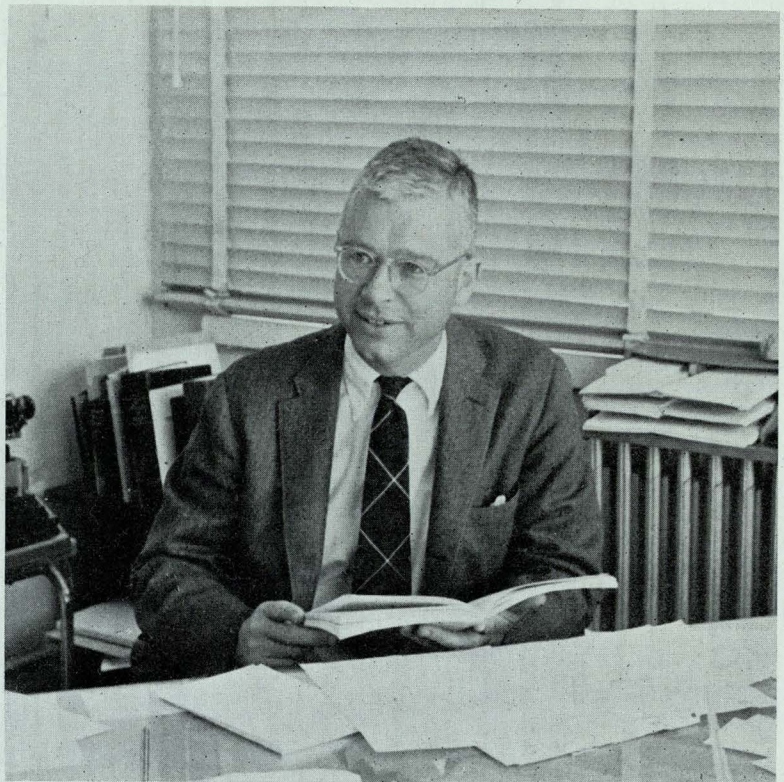

J. PAUL LEONARD was named president of the American University of Beirut in 1957. He studied at Columbia University and received his Ph.D. degree in 1929. In 1954 he was awarded an honorary doctorate in humanities. He started his teaching career in public schools in 1923. In 1945 he was appointed professor of education at Stanford University, and in that same year he was named president of San Francisco State College and remained there until 1957.

FARID S. HANANIA, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, graduated from AUB in 1941 with a B.B.A. degree. In 1932 he studied law at Cambridge University and later practiced law at the London Bar as a Barrister-at-Law. In 1945 he joined the Faculty of Arts and Sciences as assistant professor. In 1948 he was named chairman of the Political Science Department, and in 1951 he was promoted to the rank of professor. In 1954 he was appointed Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

WALTER WYANT, B.A. and formerly assistant to the dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, was named executive officer this year.

WILLIAM FLASH, Ph.D., was promoted from associate professor of public administration to assistant dean of Arts and Sciences in 1959.

ARCHIE S. CRAWFORD, M.A., vice president for special services, talks to Fuad Sarruf, L.L.D., vice president and secretary.

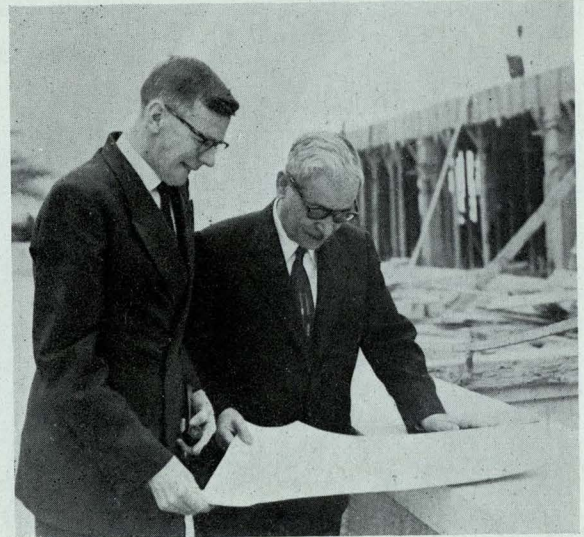

STETSON HOLMES, B.A., newly named vice president in charge of finance, goes over building plans with Aziz Kaiser Nahhas, B.A., B.S.C.E., superintendent of buildings and grounds.

ABDUR-RAHMAN BARBIR, B.A., director of housing, studies building plans with Henry George Mardell, director of the boarding department.

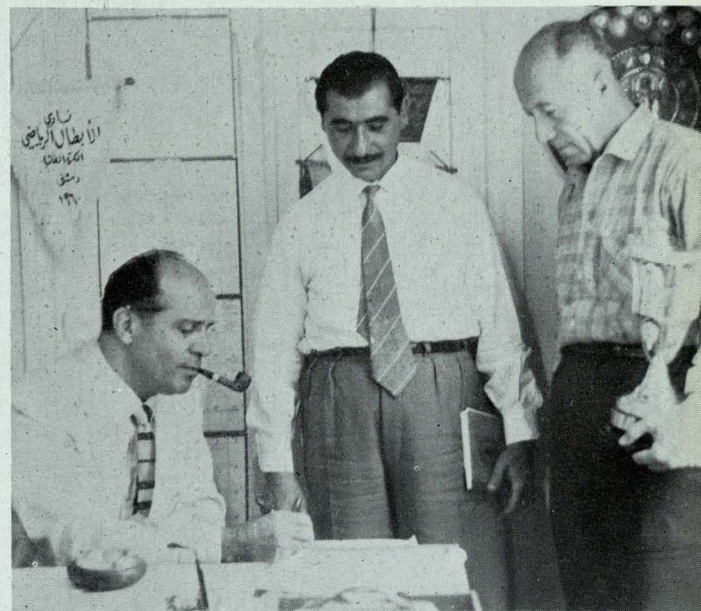

MICHEL SHAMM'A, M.A., adviser to freshman students, discusses the student aid fund with Mrs. Elsa Kerr, M.A., adviser to women students, and Levon Melikian, Ph.D., acting dean of student life.

FRANCIS L. KENT, M.A., university librarian, looks at new building plans with Jibrán Bikhazi, assistant librarian.

EMILE RUBEIZ, B.B.A., assistant registrar, discusses student transcript problems with Farid Fuleihan, B.B.A., registrar.

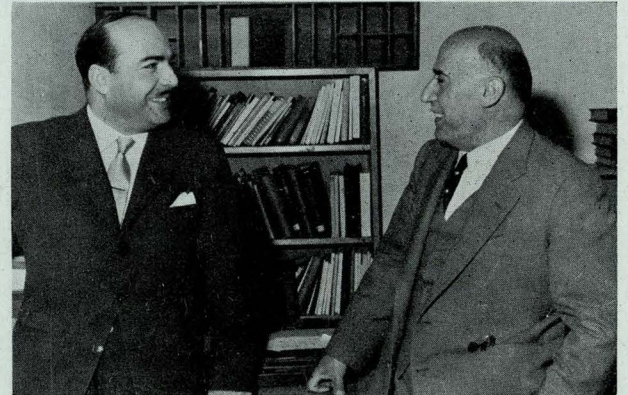

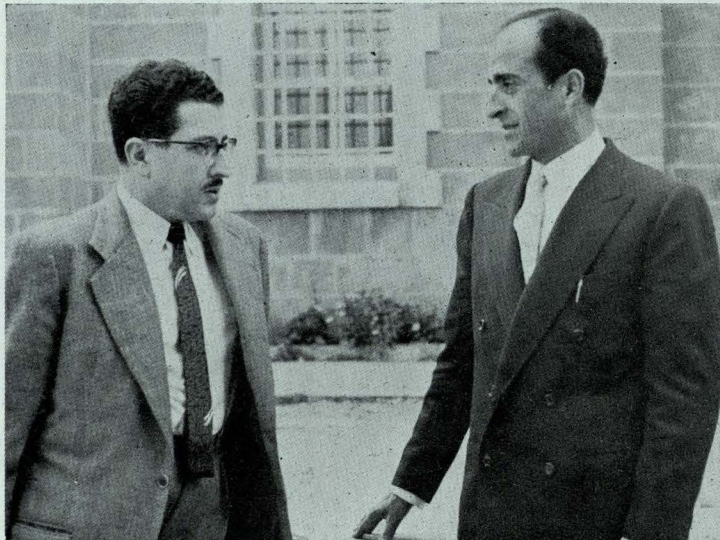

ABED S. TARABULSI, M.A., director of physical education, plans the Spring Games with Elias Bawli and Sief-eldine Sidani.

ANTOINE KARAM, Ph.D., professor of Arabic, confers with Fuad Tarazi, M.A., instructor, Nadim Naimy, M.A., instructor, and Jibrial S. Jabbur, Ph.D., professor and chairman.

A RENAISSANCE in Arabic literature which began in the 19th century is being continued in the fullest sense of the word by the Arabic Department. Besides teaching and supervising the research of eight undergraduate and 18 graduate students, the faculty is constantly writing or editing translations, scholarly articles, poems, novels, biographies and research.

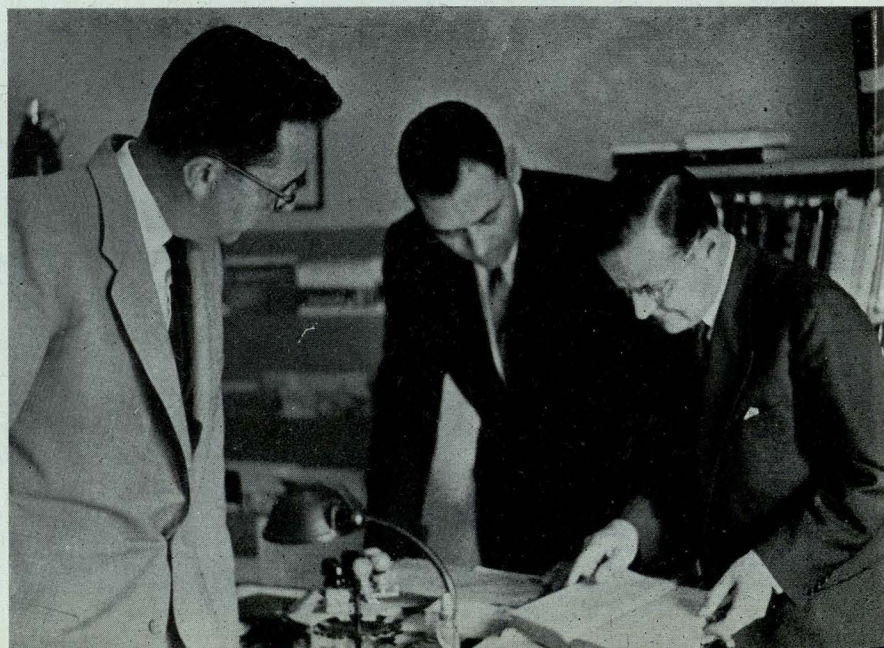

ANTOINE KARAM, Ph.D., professor of Arabic, chats with Anis Frayha, Ph.D., professor.

MOHAMMAD NAJM, Ph.D., associate professor of Arabic, talks to Khalil S. Hawi, Ph.D., assistant professor.

THE ARAB Studies Program is a special graduate study sequence which offers a full educational orientation on the Middle Eastern Arab world. The program is sponsored through a special grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. The faculty in this program include members of the departments of Arabic, Economics, Education, General Education, Geography, History, Political Studies and Public Administration, Public Health, and Sociology. Nine graduate students are majoring in the Arab Studies master's degree plan.

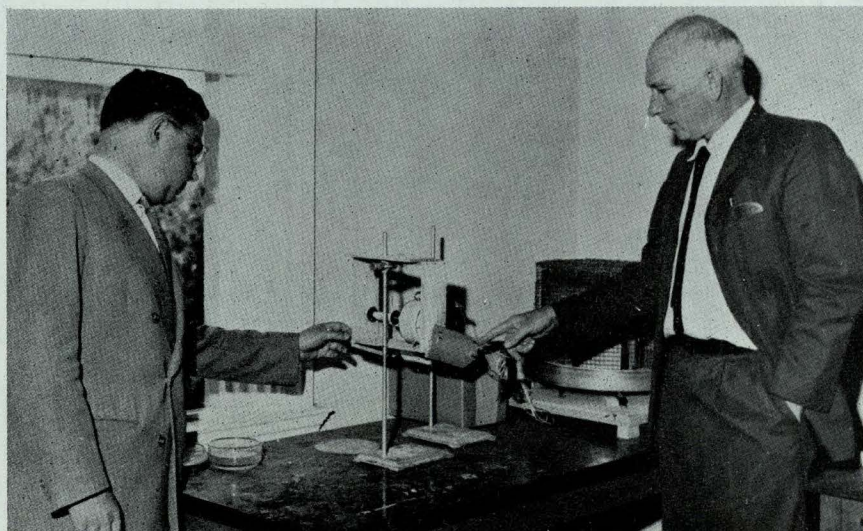

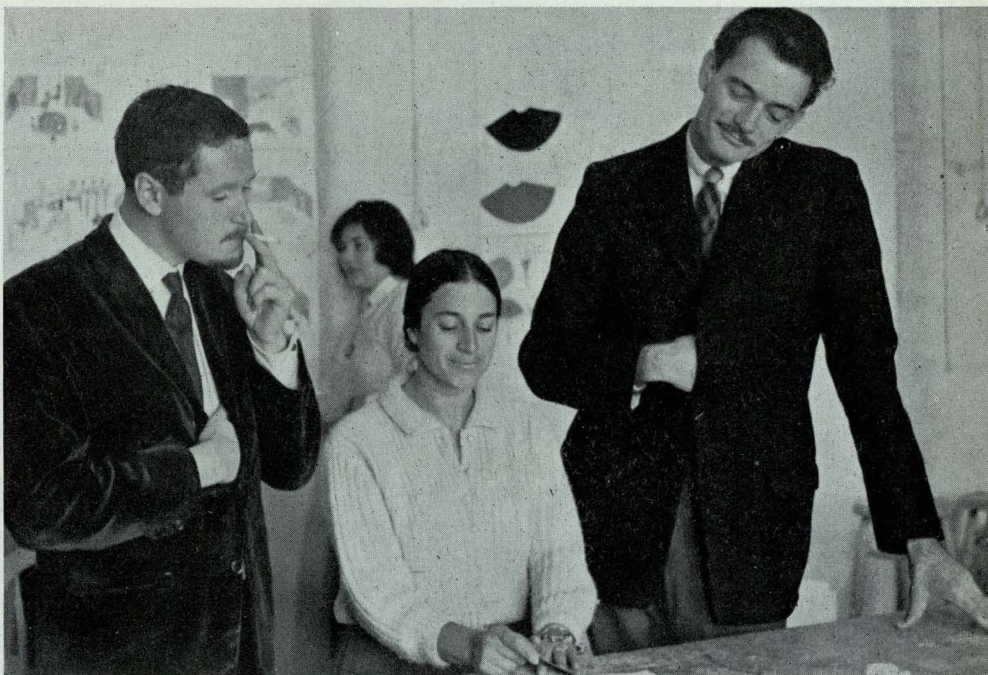

NABIH A. FARIS, Ph.D., professor of Arab history and director of the Arab Studies Program, discusses Middle Eastern problems with two of his students.

JOHN CARSWELL, A.R.C.A., assistant professor of art, and Arthur Frick, M.S., assistant professor and chairman, watch Mrs. Fay Frick, M.S., assistant professor, paint.

ADIVERSE choice in the fine arts is offered to the interested student by the Art Department. Interest in the field of fine arts is on the increase, and at present there are seven undergraduate and two graduate students majoring in the field or are group majors.

The three faculty members have done considerable research and study on the history of art, sculpturing, and painting. Also they are actively engaged in practicing these endeavors.

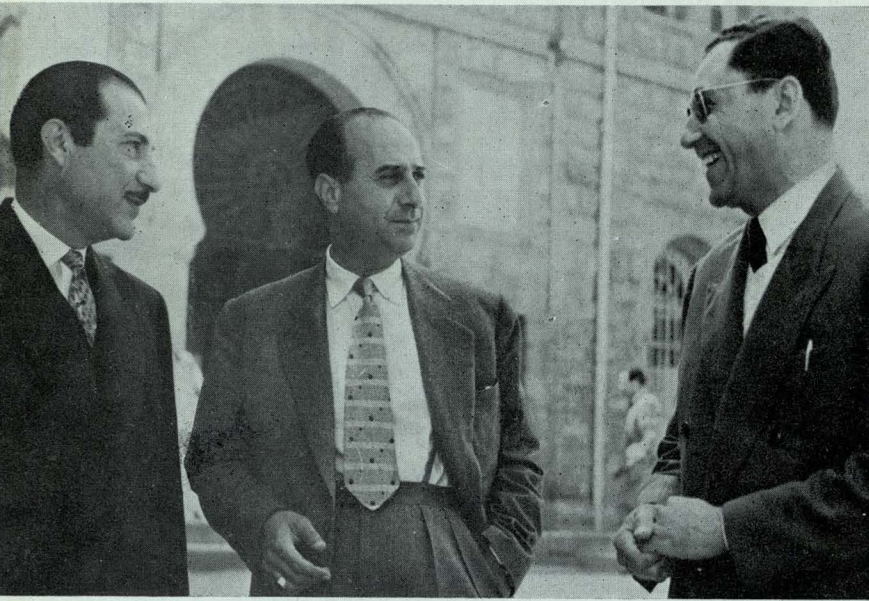

SALIM ABU-KHALIL and Hurst F. Shoemaker, Ph.D., professor and chairman of the biology department, test a machine.

FRED WHITE, Ph.D., associate professor of biology, considers a scientific problem with fellow biologists: Robert Lewis, Ph.D., assistant professor; Levon Babikian, Ph.D., associate professor, and John Mirhij, Ph.D., professor.

THIS year's Biology majors included nine graduate, 17 senior and 56 junior students. Members of this faculty allocate their time to a variety of research projects in addition to teaching. To list a few of these projects, Dr. Babikian is working on "The effect of adrenocortical hormones on the structure of the thyroid", Dr. Shoemaker on fishes of Lebanon, Dr. Mirhij on soil fungi on crops, Dr. White on the role of the Kidney in hypertension and Dr. Lewis on the systematic consideration of a specie of fleas in Lebanon.

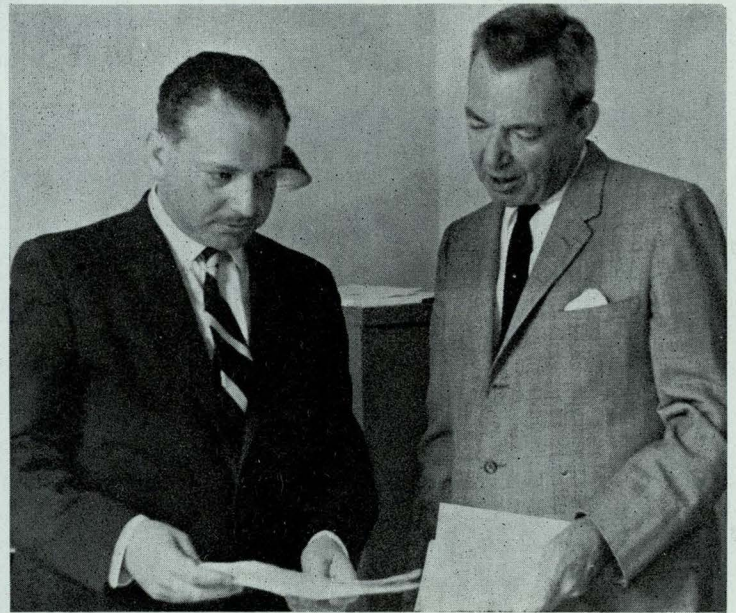

FUAD BADR, B.B.A., instructor in the brief business program, and Michel Shamma'a, M.A., assistant professor and chairman, listen to Jamal Ghattas, M.B.A., instructor.

ISAM ASHOUR, D.Sc., associate professor and chairman of business administration, talks to John Fistere, lecturer.

AZIZ MARMURA, M.B.A., instructor of business administration; Harry Guenther, M.B.A., assistant professor, and Zuhayr Mikdashi, B.Litt., instructor, study a book on market research.

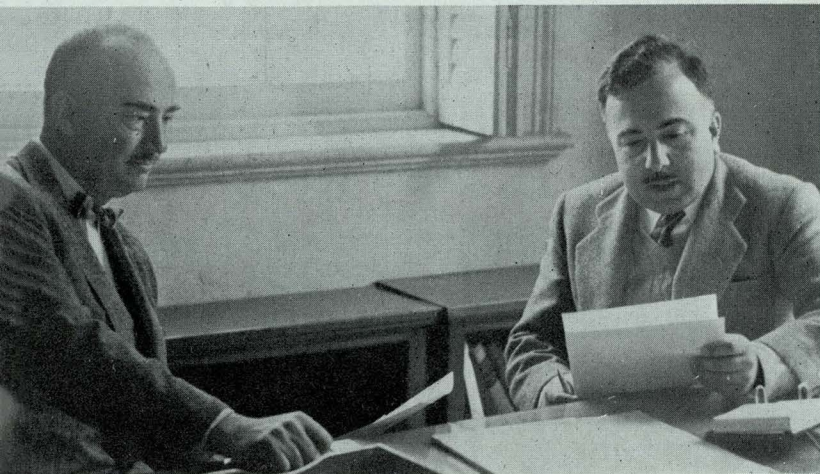

A POPULAR two-year program with the AUB students is the Brief Business Program which is designed to give the student a practical orientation in business methods and practices. There were 32 first — year students and 24 second — year students enrolled in this course of study this year.

ONE of our college's largest departments is Business Administration. Ninety-seven sophomores, 44 juniors, 46 seniors, 23 graduate students, and 20 special students are studying in this major. With the growth of business education-mindedness in the Middle East, the department is more concerned with new techniques and means of carrying on commercial transaction and administration than in pure research.

Miss SANDRA RICHARD, M.B.A., instructor of business administration, and Arthur Mills, M.Sc., associate professor, confer with Emile D. Ghattas, M.B.A., instructor.

R.E. UNGER, B.B.A., lecturer in business administration, discusses a business problem with Burhan Dajani, M.A., assistant professor.

Mrs. NUHAD SALIBI, B.S., assistant instructor of chemistry, helps her students with an experiment.

CONTINUOUS effort and diligence is the best description one might give of the Chemistry Department faculty and students. Twenty-three seniors and the same number of juniors, five graduate students, and three special students are majoring in this field.

Altius is not large enough to provide ample space to list all research projects being worked upon or on the agenda of the department. But the list of a few includes: Dr. Karim's research on the spectroscopic analysis of silicone-alkyd comolymers; Dr. Bentley's work on electrochemical processes in silica gels; Dr. Hanania's further studies on hemoproteins; Dr. Issidorides' work in the field of steriods and trimethylene oxides; Dr. Sarkis on the reactions in nonaqueous solvents; Dr. Sauer on photolysis of alkyl and aryl isocyanates, and Mr. Wakid's planned research on the isolation and properties of adenosinetriphosphatase.

KENTON E. BENTLEY, Ph.D., assistant professor of chemistry, talks to Costas H. Issidorides, Ph.D., associate professor.

ADIB SARKIS, Ph.D., associate professor of chemistry, confers with Mrs. Wardih Bayyuk, B.S., assistant instructor; Miss Maggie Ghosn, M.S., instructor, and Aziz Abdul Karim, Ph.D., associate professor and chairman.

GEORGE I.H. HANANIA, Ph.D., associate professor of chemistry; Shibli Bayyuk, B.S., instructor, and Adib Sarkis, Ph.D., associate professor, talk to Kenneth Sauer, Ph.D., assistant professor.

MOHAMMAD DIAB, D.Sc., assistant professor of economics, reads a magazine article with Jack Karkar, M.A., instructor.

ELIAS SABA, B.Litt., instructor of economics, talks to Paul J. Klat, B.Litt., chairman and associate professor.

FORTY-NINE students are majoring in the Economics Department, which includes 20 senior, 13 junior, seven graduate, and nine special students who are in their second year of post-graduate study. In addition to teaching the students, the faculty operates the Economic Research Institute. Among the research projects being undertaken are: Prof. Klat's "Supplement to Bibliography of Economic Literature in the Arab Speaking Countries of the Middle East" and the Middle East Economic Papers; Dr. Badre's study of Arabic economic terminology, and Dr. Diab's study of the input and output for the Northern Province of the U.A.R.

ROBERT PETTENGILL, Ph.D., visiting professor of economics, exchanges ideas with Samir Makdisi, Ph.D., instructor.

LESLIE LEAVITT, M.A., professor of education, considers student problems with Frederick Korf, Ph.D., chairman and associate professor; Mrs. Elsa Kerr, M.A., assistant professor, and Will Burnett, Ph.D., visiting professor.

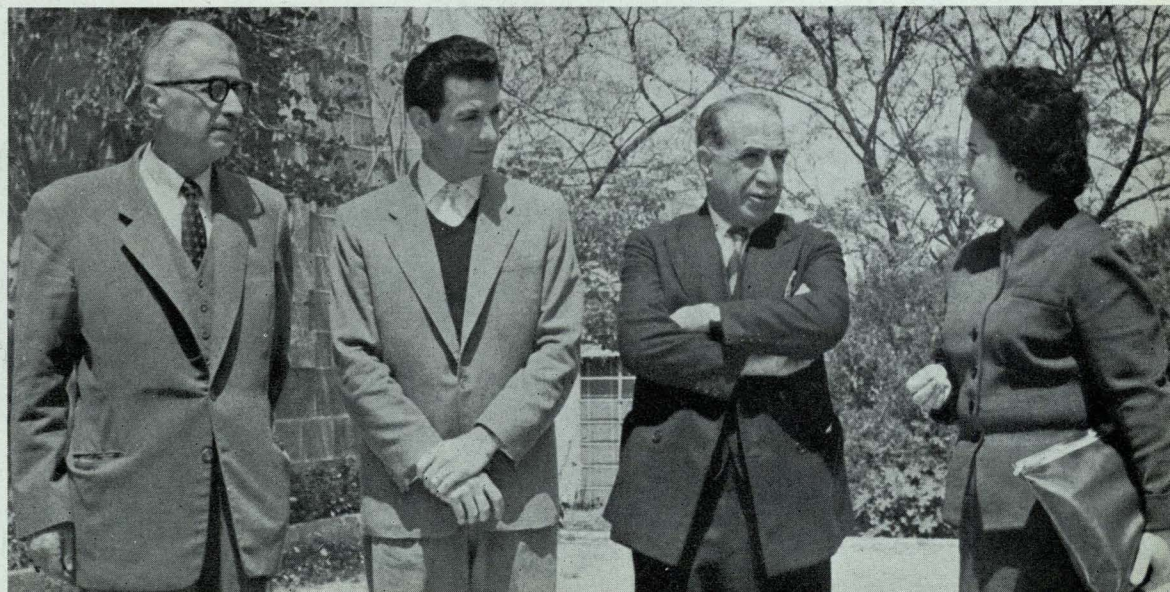

MRS. FAIZEH ANTIPPA, M.A., assistant professor of education, looks on as Louis Cajoleas, Ph.D., assistant professor, reads to Mrs. Sabiha Faris, M.A., instructor, and Mrs. Adele Takieddine, M.A., instructor.

THE second largest department in the college is the Education Department in which 34 juniors, 31 seniors, 62 graduate students and 15 special students are studying.

The faculty of the department is international, not only in personnel make-up but in research emphasis. Among the projects completed by the faculty members are Prof. Najjar's "Dictionary of Education", Prof. Faris' study of children's language; Dr. Atiyeh's cross-cultural study of the personalistic and intellectualistic in education in the United States and France; Prof. Korf's "Some Changes in Students During the First Year of Graduate Work in Science Education"; Prof. Shahla's work on civic education and Mrs. Takieddine's current study of problems of adolescents in Beirut.

JIBRAIL KATUL, B.A., professor of education; Mounir Khoury, Ph.D., assistant professor, and George Shahla, M.A., professor, listen to Pergrouhi Najarian, Ph.D., associate professor.

ALLEN VINCENT-BARWOOD, M.S., assistant professor of education, schedules audio-visual duties with Suhail Khoury, B.A.

NAIL ATIYEH, Ph.D., assistant professor of education, chats with Miss Maha Hourani, B.A., and Haseeb Mroueh, M.S., instructor.

GEORGE F. TAYLOR, Ministry of Education Teaching Diploma, instructor of English, watches Malcolm Welland, B.A., associate professor and Mrs. Welland, B.A., instructor, grade papers.

OUR ENGLISH Department is actually spread over three fields of concentration, the study of English literature and composition in the normal major field, the vital Special Form English Program which qualifies many previously non-English speaking students for admission and the European and Classical Languages section. Twenty-one students are majoring in English; there are seven juniors, 12 seniors, one graduate student, and one special student.

A newly added field of interest and study in the English Department this year is the course in dramatic arts under the supervision of Miss Gibson.

Miss JOY GIBSON, Diploma in Dramatic Art and lecturer in drama and English, touches up the makeup on one of her actresses.

EDWARD JENKINSON (third from left) M.A., instructor of journalism, works with Outlook editors on the preparation of the weekly newspaper.

THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT secretary sits in on a meeting with Mrs. Maria Bankoul, Licences des Lettres, instructor of French; C.H.O. Scaife, M.A., professor and chairman; Mrs. Antonia Geystor, Licences des Sciences Sociales, instructor of French, and Klaus Schulz, Ph.D., lecturer in German.

Mrs. ELIZABETH SCOTT, M.A., assistant professor of English, talks to Miss Josephine Bisharat, M.A., instructor, and Gilbert Tutungi, M.A., instructor.

JAMES SOMERVILLE, M.A., instructor of English, reads a magazine with Miss Joy Gibson, Diploma in Dramatic Art and lecturer in drama and English, and Edgar Lowe, instructor.

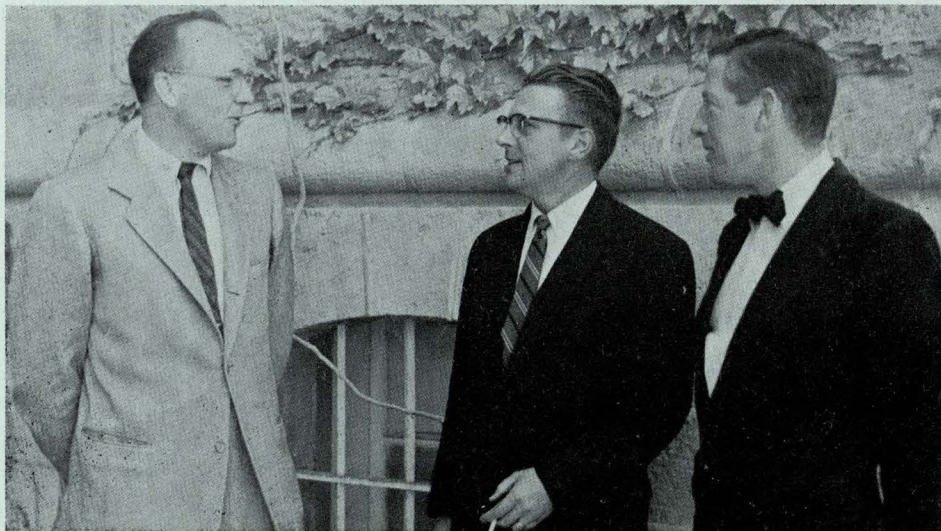

Mrs. LAURE GROW, M.A., instructor of English, works with Richard Yorkey, Ed.D., assistant professor.

Mrs. JANE STEVENSON, assistant instructor of English; Miss Mary Lord, M.A., instructor, and Mrs. Desanka Kurtovic, assistant instructor, grade special form English papers.

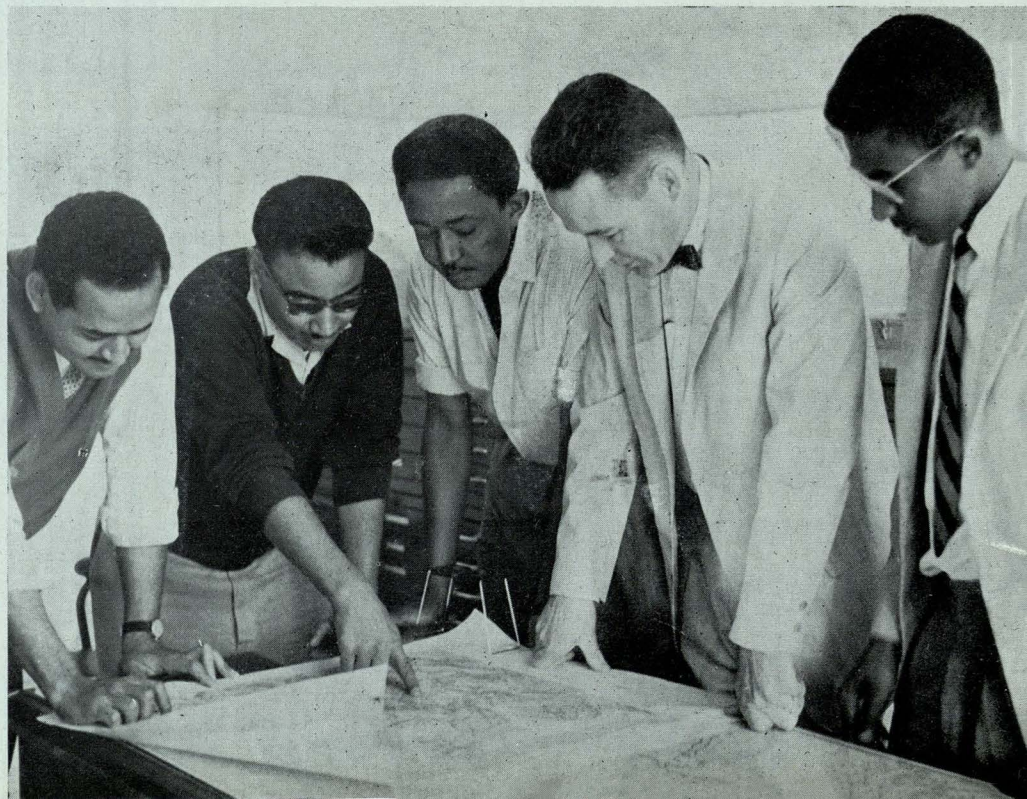

ROBERT McCLESTER, B.A., instructor of English, talks to Robert Howling, Ph.D., associate professor, and Robert Axelby, B.A., instructor.

AS YET no student is majoring in geography, but this does not mean to imply that many of us have not enjoyed and benefitted from the courses offered in this field of study.

While here at the University, Prof. Illick has not only taught courses but has taken keen interest in the cartography and economic and regional geography of the Middle East over which he has traveled considerably.

THEODOOR RAVEN, D.Sc., visiting professor of geology, examines rocks with Bryan Gregor, M.A., instructor.

GEOLGY is another relatively new field of study at AUB, and as yet no student has chosen this field as his major although, 53 students attended geology courses in the first semester of this academic year.

The department is at present engaged in a study of the structure of the Bekaa. The project is being financed by the Rockefeller Foundation. Some studies are also being made of date on the continent and ocean floors with a view to re-examine the question of continental drift.

HAIG KHATCHADOURIAN, Ph.D., assistant professor of philosophy and general education; Majid Fakhry, Ph.D., associate professor; John Adams, Ph.D., associate professor and chairman, and John Spagnolo, B.A., assistant instructor, discuss the general education program.

AS STUDENTS are required to take the courses in General Education. In these courses they study Western and Middle Eastern civilization from their beginnings through the Enlightenment, involving the sciences and the humanities. The emphasis is placed on those continuing or recurring values which are relevant for contemporary life.

While studying General Education, the student also learns about Western and Middle Eastern civilization from the 19th century to the present.

The faculty constantly re-evaluates these courses, studying and doing independent research so that the students will benefit greatly from these courses.

JOHN BROWN, Th.D., assistant professor of general education, talks to Roland Pucetti, D. de l'Univ., assistant professor, and William Sewell, B.A., B.Litt., professor.

RICHARD LEMAY, Ph.D., assistant professor of general education, exchanges ideas with Mel Peet, M.A., assistant professor.

DIKRAN KOUYMIJIAN, B.A., assistant instructor of general education, confers with Jesse V. Mauzey, Ph.D., associate professor, and William Gohlman, B.A., instructor.

ABDUL-AZIZ EL-DURI, Ph.D., visiting professor of history, talks to Constantin Zurayk, Ph.D., distinguished professor.

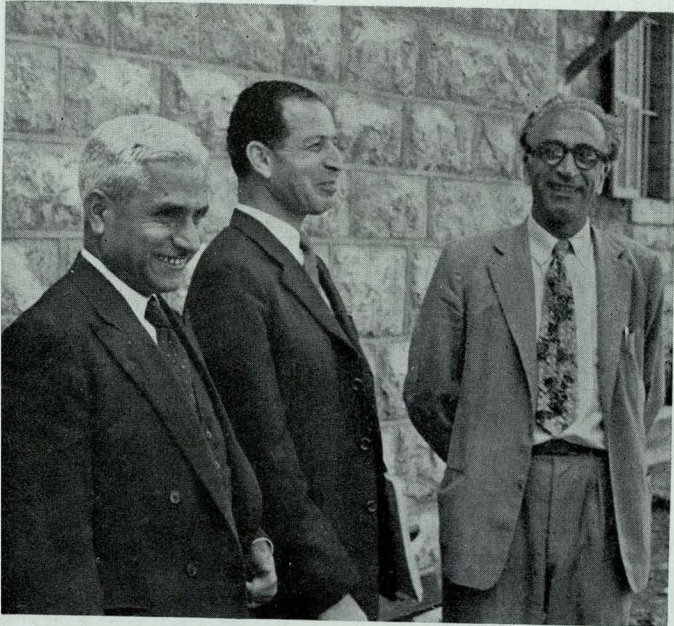

THIRTY-FOUR students, 15 juniors, nine seniors, and ten graduate students, are majoring in history.

The faculty and students alike in this department are providing enlightening research. Among the current projects are Dr. Zeine's study of the origin of parliamentary government in the Near East, Dr. Zurayk's history of Ibn al-Furat, Dr. Salibi's study of Moslem aristocracy of learning in Mameluke time, and Dr. Ziadeh's study of the political organization of the Arab states of North Africa.

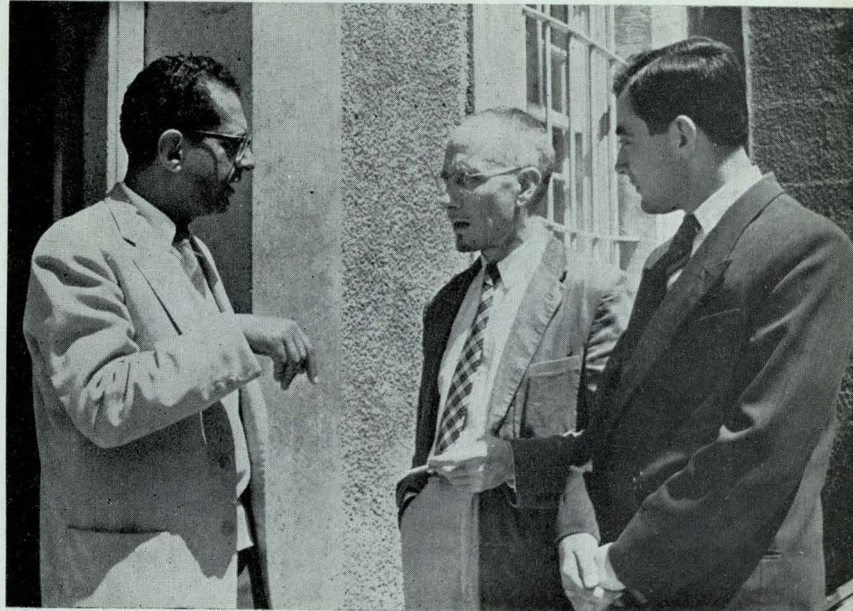

BURTON THURSTON, Th.D., lecturer in religion; Zeine N. Zeine, Ph.D., professor and chairman of history; Nabih Faris, Ph.D., professor, and David Gordon, Ph.D., assistant professor, discuss current problems in the Middle East.

KAMAL SALIBI, Ph.D., associate professor of history, exchanges ideas with Nicola Ziadeh, Ph.D., professor.

WASFI HIJAB, Ph.D., associate professor and chairman of mathematics, discusses an equation with Edward Kennedy, Ph.D., professor, and Mohammad Agha.

UMA SHUKLA, Ph.D., visiting professor of mathematics, talks to Amin Muwafi, Ph.D., assistant professor and Jamil Ali, B.Sc., associate professor.

Mrs. Mary Hanania REGIER, Ph.D., assistant professor of mathematics; Peter Yff, Ph.D., associate professor, and Abdul Latif, talk about mathematical equations.

TWENTY-THREE students are majoring in mathematics. A breakdown by classes is as follows: 13 juniors, five seniors, three graduate students and two special students.

The faculty of the department has published a great number of articles and larger publications. Professors Kennedy, Khamis, Varnavides, and Hijab have published many articles on mathematics.

Miss Mary Louise DAVIDIAN, Miss Leila Khoury, M.A., instructor of mathematics, and Mark Lesley, B.S., graduate assistant, solve a problem.

SALVADOR ARNITA, L.A.S.C., L.G.S.M., M.I.C.C.S., assistant professor of music and Mrs. Arnita, assistant instructor, listen to Nedko Etinoff, instructor.

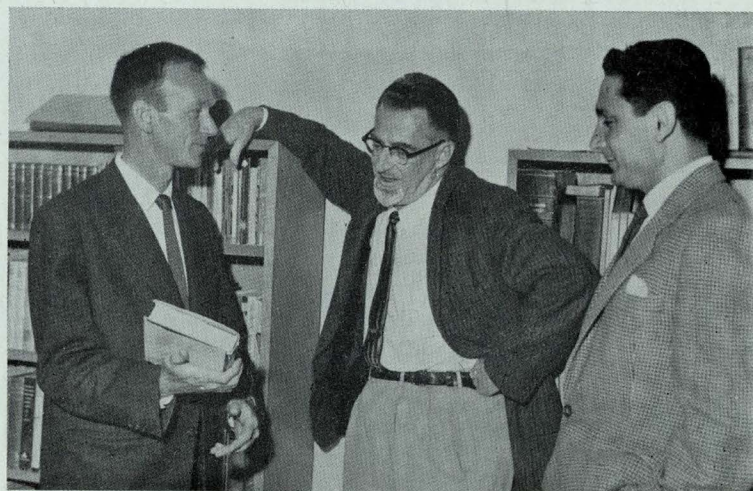

THE MUSIC Department is best known for its sponsorship of the popular Christmas and Easter musicales. While it is not a major field of study at AUB, the department offers a number of courses to the musically inclined.

Prof. and Mrs. Arnita are presently nearing completion on a research project on Arabic folk music in Lebanon. They have already finished a similar study on the folk music of Jordan. Prof. Arnita is ever striving to increase the cause of music at AUB through more intellectual programs about music as well as listening programs.

RICHARDSCOTT, M.A., chairman and assistant professor of philosophy, talks to Jesse V. Mauzey, Ph.D., associate professor, and Majid Fakhry, Ph.D., associate professor.

SIX JUNIORS, seven seniors, and six graduate students are majoring in philosophy this year.

Among the faculty's research work in addition to teaching classes and supervising student research, Prof. Khatchadourian is completing a book on philosophical analysis; Prof. Mauzey is working on a manual of elementary formal logic; Prof. Puccetti is doing work on philosophy and falsification; Prof. Scott is writing on "Whitehead's Theory of Value", and Prof. Fakhry is preparing a history of Arab philosophical thought.

MAN'S behavior is the subjects of study in the field of psychology. At AUB, a small number of students have chosen to major in this field but a considerable percentage are exposed to the teachings and readings of this department. Twenty-four students are psychology majors.

Among the faculty research projects are many stimulating subjects such as Prof. Diab's research in personality area and Prof. Davis' study concerning the behavioral mechanisms by which animals maintain an adequate water balance.

LEVON MELIKIAN, Ph.D., chairman and associate professor of psychology, talks to Lutfi Diab, Ph.D., assistant professor; Saniyya Nakkash, B.A., graduate assistant; John Davis, Ph.D., assistant professor, and the department's secretaries.

FRANZ BRUIN D.Sc., associate professor of physics, and Jim Talman, Ph.D., assistant professor, watch Salwa Nassar, Ph.D., professor, working on an experiment.

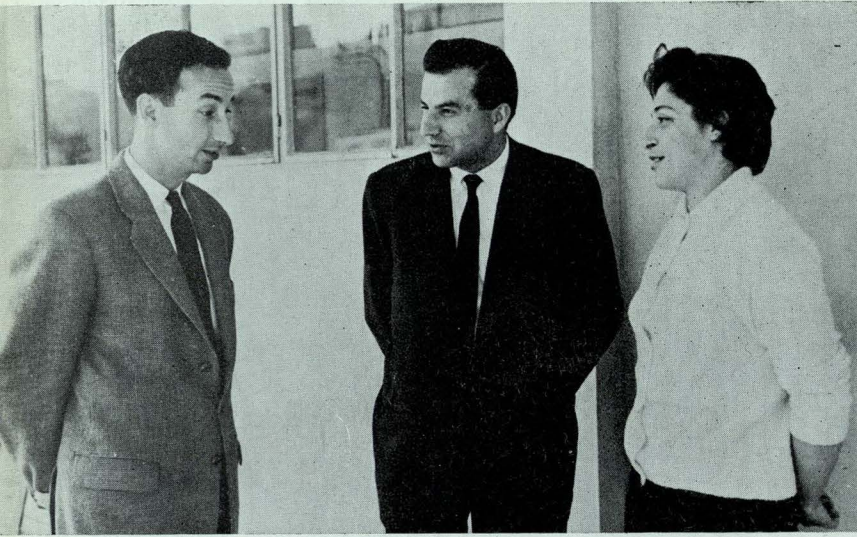

STUDY in the pure science of physics has been the choice of study for six juniors, six seniors, six graduate students, and one special student.

The department's research has been concentrated in the following fields due to limitation of facilities which will soon be expanded: paramagnetic resonance absorption, molecular physics, very low temperature physics, the intensity of cosmic-ray photon project, theoretical physics, and diffusion in solids. The Research Corporation has contributed a total of $ 20,000 to date and has encouraged the study of diffusion in single crystals, the electronic structure of molecular systems, and paramagnetic resonance absorption. The department has also received several other grants for further study in selected fields.

ANTOINE ZAHLAN, Ph.D., chairman and assistant professor of physics, discusses a law of physics with Friedrich Heineken, D.Sc., assistant professor, and Mr. Mansus.

PIERRE MOURAD, M.Sc., instructor of physics, confers with Alfred Einarsson, Ph.D., visiting professor; the secretary and Nicola Shahin, M.A., assistant professor.

JOHN MCCLAIN, Ph.D., assistant professor of physics, talks to Mr. Hammoudate and Miss Milias.

WALID KHALIDI, B.Litt., assistant professor of political science, discusses politics with Hassan Saab, Ph.D., lecturer, and Jawad Dajani, M.A., assistant professor.

THE two divisions of the PSPA department have grown in recent years to become one of the most popular majors among A & S students. Eighty-four students from sophomores to graduate students are majoring in Political Science, while 68 students are concentrating in Public Administration.

Among the faculty research projects are Prof. Crow's study on the role of public bureaucracy in Syria, 1943-1958; Prof. Khalidy's work on the primary Arabic sources of the Palestine War and Prof. Saab's study on Arab political thought.

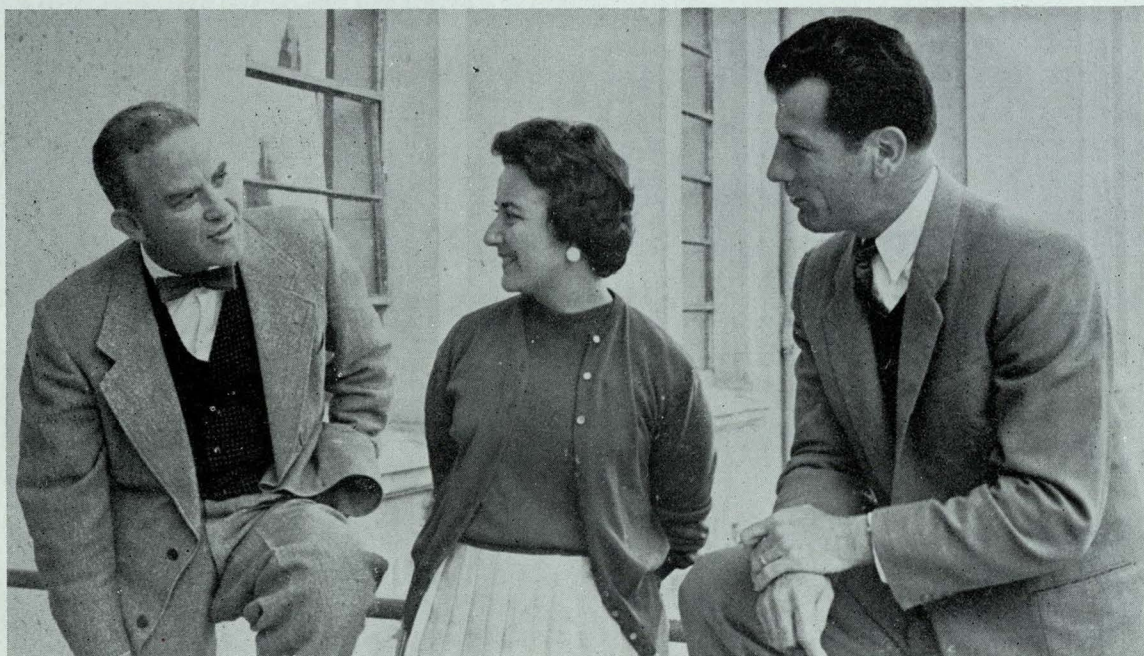

YASIN MUGHIR, M.A., instructor of political studies, talks to Leiper Freeman, Ph.D., visiting professor, and Adnan Iskandar, M.A., instructor.

RALPH CROW, M.A., assistant professor of political studies and chairman, reads an Arabic newspaper with Malcolm Kerr, Ph.D., assistant professor.

FOUR juniors, eight seniors, ten graduate students and four special students are presently majoring in Sociology or Anthropology.

Among the works of the faculty which are involved in the study of man in society, Dr. Weightman is doing a study of the emerging middle class in Lebanon; Dr. Fetter has been working on a study of community development and attitudes of Bekaa villagers toward social change, and Mr. Khalaf, a candidate for a Ph. D. at Princeton University, is doing work on "Commitment of the Labor Force and Industrial Force and Industrial Development in Lebanon".

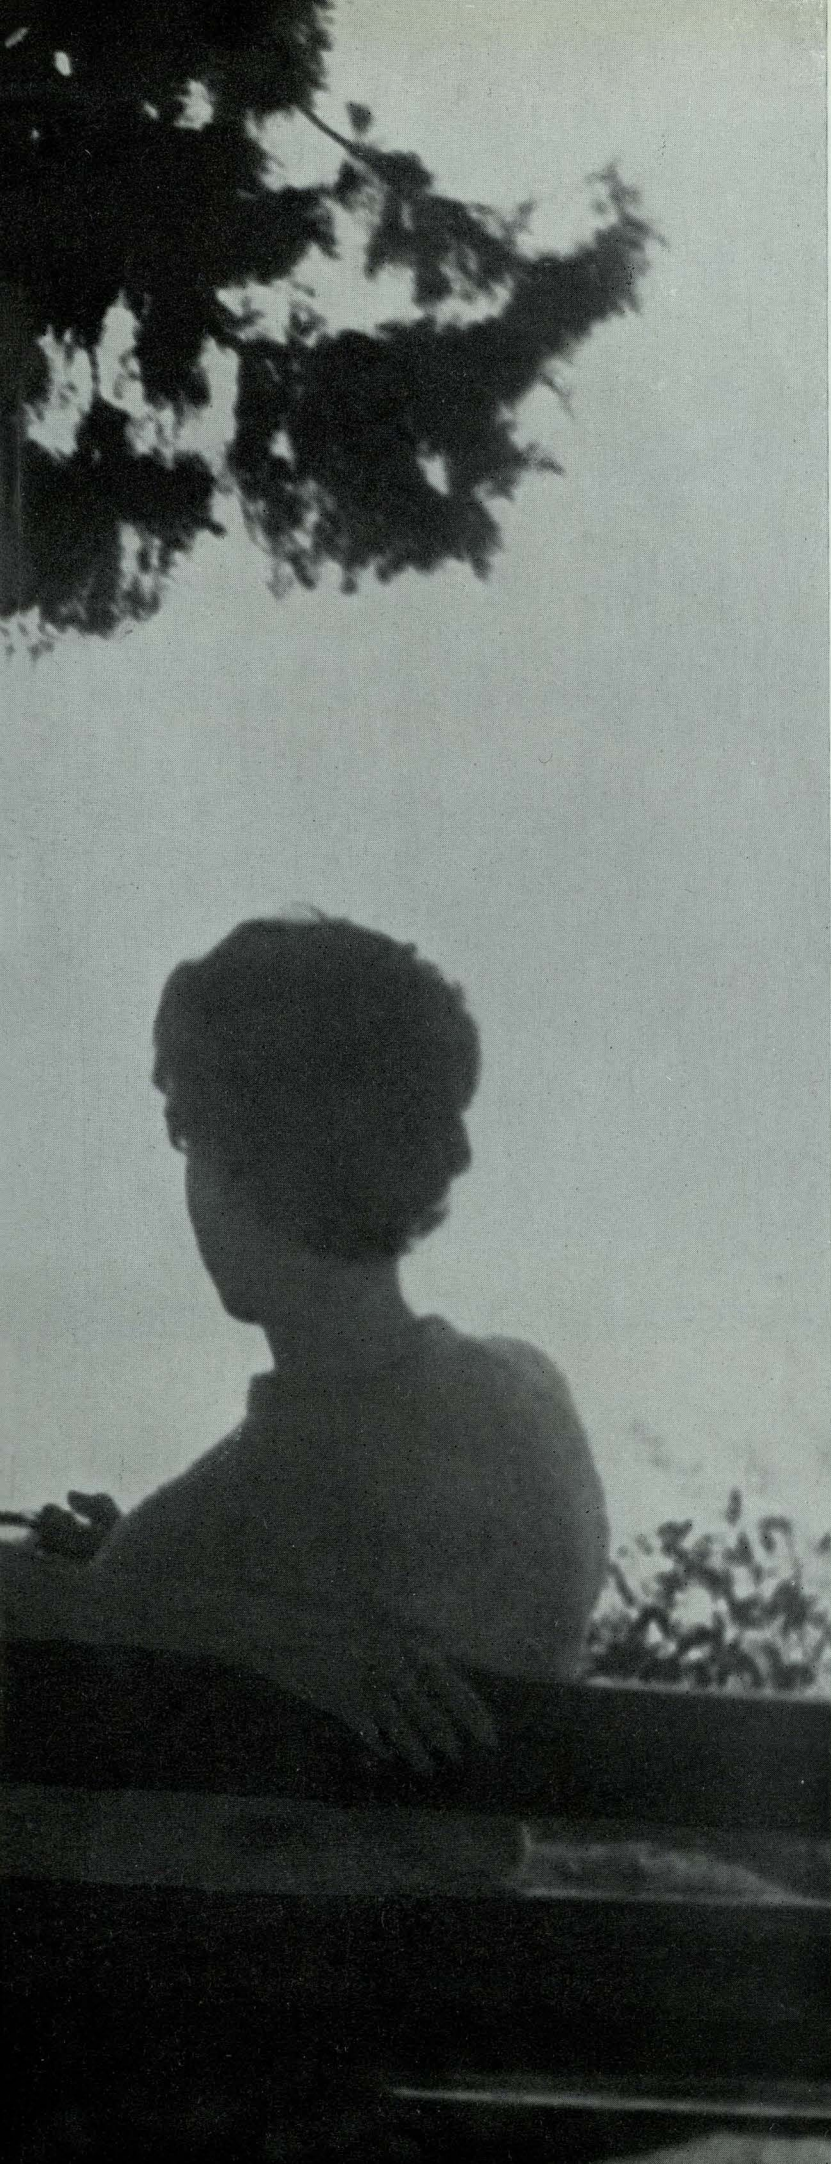

GEORGE FETTER, Ph.D., associate professor of sociology, talks to Mrs. Grace Hajjar, M.A., instructor, and Munir Houry, Ph.D., assistant professor of education.

GEORGE WEIGHTMAN, M.A., assistant professor of sociology, talks to Gene Peterson, Ph.D., assistant professor, and Samir Khalaf, M.A., instructor.

STUDENTS, this school is ours. It reflects what we are, what we have been and shows us the way to a better future. As undergraduates, the opportunity is present to tap the resources of the minds of learned men, to meet and accept the challenge of new ideas and theories, and to learn how to put our knowledge into practice. The opportunity is here to understand others through the important means of discussion — even argument — always trying to keep both sides in mind and coming up with a balanced, objective opinion. But all is not so serious, for as students we have time to be ourselves with few enduring responsibilities that cannot be forgotten over a cup of coffee or dancing at a ball. Yet, while we play, there is that intangible something leading us to bigger and better things. Always upward — altius.

MANY of our graduates have reached the top — altius — in university life. Some will go even higher in the pursuit of knowledge. But regardless whether they study for higher degrees or study their surroundings and contribute to their fellow man, they have earned their place of deserved honor. They have achieved the goal which every student sets for himself. Although a diploma signifies to the world a certain level of competence, there is still something beyond — the life each has planned for himself. While it may be dimly outlined now, soon the foundation which has been laid will take shape and the high position of today will be the keystone for a more successful future. Our graduates have had help; now they must face the future almost alone, but they can always rely on a background that only AUB can give, and they will stand among their fellow men ever higher — altius.

THROUGH the years, while we have been learning that we should set higher standards for ourselves while we are still within AUB's walls, we have had help from outside. This help, although not always recognized and sometimes not even appreciated, has, nevertheless, always been present. Our advertisers support us in almost every endeavor, whether it is this yearbook or the student newspaper or the program for a play. They have taught us one major lesson — a university, to be successful, needs supports. Now that we are graduating, we have an obligation to look back, while we are striving to make our way to the top, with appreciation. Now, as alumni, we can help others realize our goal — altius — with our generosity and moral support.

Invention Is the Necessity of Mother

We wonder who first coined the phrase "Woman's work is never done". Probably a man.

In any case, it is now out of date.

Modern mums like putting their feet up for pleasure — not just because they are dog-tired. And 5,000 research workers at SHELL are aiding and abetting them.

In the SHELL laboratories inventive minds are continually developing from petroleum new base materials which help manufacturers of household products to take the irk out of work in the home.

CATHOLIC PRESS

Wherever you might be in Lebanon you are likely to meet the inmates of this book, for they are the everyday people and happenings, alive, lovable captivating.

Though some of the scenes depicted are more typical of village life than that of the town, once out of the main thoroughfares, even in Beirut our capital, all goes on the same way.

On most of the three arcaded Lebanese balconies a small basket at the end of a long rope, awaits the orders of its master.

"Om Ali" sells her wild chicory in residential quarters, for the millionaires of Beirut enjoy its slightly bitter taste as much as the peasant who picks it by his door.

"Kebbé" is still the bane of city dwellers in our large, new apartment houses for whereas not all share the dish, they all share the noise thereof.

Look out for the "four bachelors" on the "tram" at the "rush hour" of course. They are going to the "Place des Canons" to have "shawerma" for lunch.

All those "tableaux vivants", these customs which make a country lovable, different, endearing, are slowly disappearing.

Soon our mountain bread will be kneaded by an automatic mixer, our "kebbé" pounded by an electronic pounder, a "barbecue" will replace "shawerma", gay tramways will be replaced by grave trolley buses, and can you imagine a frisky basket going down from the heights of an austere sky-scraper? Our wild chicory will soon be sterilised, put in nylon bags and placed in self-service shops which will replace our street vendors: and those delightful donkeys, long suffering and cheerful, what will happen to them, when this mode of transport will be eliminated by some motorised vehicle?

Even now, one has to go far and high up in our mountains to see the dancers of the sword and shield and those of the lively dabké.

That is why I have tried, very humbly, to carve out these passing scenes of my country, to keep them a bit longer, and to make them known; to carve them out on wood, for it is strong and vibrant and vital as are the people and customs of this my beloved Lebanon.
